Actors Given 'Guild Shop;' Strike Plan Voted Down

Expected Support Is Lost for Crafts

FMPC Will Continue to Picket Studios and Theaters.

On the Labor Front.

The Screen Actors Guild voted to abandon plans for a general walk-out today after a majority of the principal film producers agreed to grant guild demands, including recognition as the sole bargaining agency for film players.

Union workers voted to call a strike in two mills of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, employing 25,000 men, if the company fails to sign a labor contract before Wednesday night.—Page 5.

Film Peace Reached.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, April 9.—The Screen Actors' Guild, by a practically unanimous vote, tonight voted to abandon plans for a general walk-out tomorrow after a majority of the major film producers agreed to grant the guild's principal demands.

Before the meeting tonight in Legion Stadium of 4,000 members of the guild, whose roster includes practically all the topnotch names in films, Joseph M. Schneck, chairman of the film producers' conference committee, announced the producers' agreement to recognize the guild demands, including recognition as the sole bargaining agency for screen players.

The guild action left the Federated Motion Picture Crafts without the support they had expected from the actors, although each was acting separately. Informed of the guild decision, Charles Lessing, F. M. P. C. head, said the crafts strike, which began ten days ago, would continue.

"We will continue our picketing of the studios and that of local theaters," Lessing said. "If the producers do not meet our demands soon we will have all the theaters in the country picketed. However, I do not think it will be necessary for us to take this drastic action."

F. M. P. C. strikers are asking for a closed shop and union recognition.

Schenck Tells of Settlement.

Schenck's statement was issued just before the guild met to take final action on a proposed walkout and was read at the meeting.

"Speaking for my own studio and the executive heads of all the other studios whom I have been able to reach," he said, "I am pleased to be able to say that all important questions discussed by committees representing the motion-picture producers and the film actors have been settled satisfactorily to both sides.

"Including Columbia Pictures, R. K. O., Paramount, M. G. M., Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox, the producers have agreed to deal with the actors under guild shop, the specific divisions to be worked out.

"Working conditions for actors have been amicably adjusted.

"It has been the common endeavor of both committees to work out the best possible conditions for players receiving smaller salaries, and it is my opinion that the points agreed upon by the committees will be regarded by all parties concerned as equitable and just."

The guild program, in view of the producers' action, was announced at the meeting tonight by Robert Montgomery, president.

"During the coming weeks we will contact studios that have already committed themselves to the guild shop agreement and obtain their signatures.

"Any studio failing to sign the guild shop agreement will be de-

Trolleys May Join Bus Strike, Paralyzing Coronation Traffic

Workers Consider Returning to Jobs or Asking Street Car Men to Walk Out; Nearly Million See Preview in Rain.

By the Associated Press.

London (Monday), May 10.—Representatives of London's striking busmen today considered whether to restore bus service before the coronation Wednesday or whether to ask street car operators to join the strike, an action which would tie up the city.

The trade union representatives scheduled a meeting this afternoon to discuss the transport board's offer to consider demands of the strikers.

London officials, harassed by increasing coronation crowds that snarled traffic, feared the ten-day-old strike might be considerably prolonged, even through the coronation, if the board's offer was rejected.

Undaunted by a cold, drizzling rain, throngs estimated at nearly 1,000,000 persons yesterday fought and jammed their way into the streets between Buckingham Palace and Westminster Abbey early to watch the final rehearsal of the coronation procession.

It was the show for the masses, the chance for those who cannot witness Wednesday's brilliant spectacle to get an idea of what the progress of King George VI and

Merrill Flying To Get Photos Of Coronation

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie took off from Floyd Bennett Field, Brooklyn, at 3:35 p. m. today in their monoplane Daily Express on a nonstop flight to London.

They planned to land there in about 19 hours, flying at 140 miles an hour. They carried pictures of the Hindenburg disaster and were to fly back with coronation news and fashion photographs.

At 10:15 p. m., Merrill radioed Eastern Air Lines at Newark, N. J., that their monoplane was 20 miles south of St. Johns, Newfoundland, and heading over the open sea. Beverly Griffiths, of E. A. L., estimated the plane had made an average of 175.2 miles per hour. The plane had traveled 1,155 miles, part of it through a driving rain.

"So long, I'll see you Thursday night," shouted Merril, ace commercial pilot and transatlantic flier, to friends as he took off.

China, Alarmed By British Talk, Seeks U. S. Aid

London - Tokyo Parleys Feared as New Move for Partition.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), May 10.—Chinese correspondents in Nanking reported today that Foreign Minister Wang Chung-Hui has instructed Dr. C. T. Wang, Ambassador-designate to the United States, to call the attention of the United States Government as soon as possible after his arrival in Washington to what appears to be "a new move for the partition of China."

The instruction followed a conversation Saturday between Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Nanking government, and Dr. H. H. Kung, minister of finance, who is in London as chief Chinese representative for the coronation of King George VI.

Dr. Kung telephoned the generalissimo ostensibly to inquire about his health but really to report on diplomatic developments in London which have been worrying the Chinese for weeks. They believe that a deal is in the making between Britain and Japan in which China will be the victim. It was because of indications of this deal

Mount Pleasant Youth Drowns, Three Saved As Canoes Capsize Shooting Potomac Rapids

The boiling rapids of the Potomac River near Chain Bridge capsized two canoes yesterday, and one canoeist—Robert Venables, 21, of 1803 Irving street northwest—was drowned. Three were saved.

Venables' companion, Norment Custis, 22, of 1839 Irving street northwest, clung to the overturned canoe and was rescued by a fisherman.

A hundred or so persons, enjoying the rugged beauty of the Upper Potomac, witnessed the tragedy, which occurred as the two young men were shooting the rapids just above Chain Bridge.

In a near approach to a second disaster below the bridge, William Resnick, of 2000 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Paul A. Unger, of 1703 K street northwest, were flung from their canoe, but were quickly recued by two men who happened along in another canoe.

Harbor police tried to drag for Venables' body yesterday afternoon, but found the current too swift for their boat. They said they would try again at flood tide.

Venables was graduated from the University of Maryland a year ago, and has since been employed at the American Security & Trust Co. His father is dead. His mother, Mrs. Marguerite B. Venables, recently was married to Col. Harry P. Herring, and she is now on her honeymoon in the Philippine Islands, where her husband is representative of the Veterans' Administration.

Custis, Venables' companion and neighbor, said after the drowning that the water was too swift for them. He added:

"I saw Robert start for the Virginia shore, and he got within 20 feet of it before he disappeared. We were about 200 yards apart and going very fast and I had no chance to help him.

"The current swept me along for a mile before I overtook the canoe and was able to catch hold of it. I saw lots of people on shore, but the river was racing so fast thy could do nothing for us.

"After I came up to the canoe, an old fisherman came out and dragged me in. I had drifted a mile with the boat. He took me ashore, and I collapsed, exhausted, and I was too tired to remember anything.

"I just lay on the bank. By the time I came to, the old fisherman had excused himself and gone. I don't know who my rescuer is, except I remember he told me he had been fishing around there for 65 years.

"It all happend very suddenly. We saw as soon as we started from the

Bill's Final Draft Goes Before Committee Tomorrow.

An income tax bill which will raise at least $3,000,000 and reach into the pocketbooks of more than 100,000 District residents will be placed before the House District Committee tomorrow by the Commissioners.

The bill, drafted into final form last night by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, will bring within the scope of taxation, not only all residents, minor and alien, but also nonresidents, estates and trusts.

According to provisions of the proposed bill, all married persons not living with their spouse, and all single persons would receive an exemption of $1,000. All married persons living with their spouse and all heads of families would receive an exemption of $2,500. A $400 exemption would be allowed for each dependant.

The rates, as estimated by Seal, would fall approximately as follows: 2 per cent on the first $1,000 above exemptions, 3 per cent on the next $2,000, 4 per cent on the next $2,000, 5 per cent on the next $2,000, 6 per cent on the next $2,000, 6 per cent on the next $2,000, and 7 per cent on the entire balance.

To illustrate: A person or estate whose income, less exemptions, totals $11,000 pays a tax of $500.

The bill would require returns from all individuals, "whether single or married and not living with spouse, certain estates and trusts, with net income of $1,000 or over, or having a gross income of $5,000 or over; from all married individuals, living with spouse having a net income of $2,500 or over, or an aggregate gross income of $5,000 or over; from all partnerships and from certain estates and trusts."

Non residents who derive income from the District would be taxed in the same manner as residents, but would receive "credit" for taxes paid in home States, the proposed bill provides.

The proposed bill further provides (1) interest penalties in the case of delinquent payments, (2) penalties for failure to file a return, pay the tax, understatement and fraud, (3) extension of time for filing return and payment of tax and (4) full or quarterly payments.

Opposed by Citizens.

On May 2, the Federation of Citizens Associations, with few dissenting votes, opposed an income tax for the District. In speaking against the tax, L. A. Carruthers, chairman of the federation's fiscal relations committee, said:

"The income field of taxation should be left to the Federal Government. It is also believed the Federal Government will in the near future raise the income tax rates and possibly reduce exemptions. Therefore, to impose a local income tax will result in overtaxation in this particular field. The committee believes the local government should depend largely on property taxes, and recommends continuation of the intangible personal property tax."

The income tax is one of several new proposals made by the Commissioners within the last ten days in an attempt to balance the District budget, now faced with a deficit of between $6,000,000 and $8,000,000.

Other tax bills have proposed levies on auto weight, persons doing business for profit in the District (the privilege tax), on inheritances, on insurance companies and in an increased rate on gasoline.

Paper Forecasts Brazil Uprisings

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 9 (U.P.).—The newspaper El Diario said today a revolution was due to start in two Brazilian states—Rio Grande Do Sul and Sao Paulo—at dawn Monday.

Twenty-five thousand state troops under Gen. Flores Da Cunha, president of Rio Grande Do Sul, were ready to oppose 17,000 or more federal troops in the state, the newspaper said.

Besides Rio Grande Do Sul and Sao Paulo, the politically powerful State of Bahia was also reported involved in a movement against the federal government of President Getulio Vargas.

City Is Preparing For Fight to Finish

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, May 9.—Basque women joined their menfolk today in digging new trenches to strengthen the iron ring on which the defenders of Bilbao are preparing to fight to the finish to hold their capital.

More than 1,000 noncombatants labored feverishly on Bilbao's fortifications, and women were plentifully scattered among those who wielded shovels, picks and other implements for long hours.

Meanwhile Basque figting men launched a savage counterattack against the insurgent positions on Mount Sollube, northeast of the city, the scene of desperate fighting yesterday. The insurgents asserted they had captured vital strategic positions there.

A terrific Basque artillery barrage at dawn opened the attack.

The noncombatant movement to the trenches was partly in response to a Communist Party manifesto calling for mobilization of the entire population of Bilbao without distinction of age or sex" to back up the sorely pressed soldiers at the front.

French Cruiser Intervenes.

Many of the volunteers marched out in formation carrying tools over their shoulders as if they were rifles.

Under the protecting guns of the French navy 3,000 more women, children and aged men from Bilbao were crossing the Bay of Biscay today to havens in France.

The French cruiser Emile Bertin kept the insurgent cruiser Almirante Cervera from halting the refugee convoy, consisting of three French merchantmen bound for Bordeaux. She intervened between the insurgent warship and the refugee ships outside Bilbao, just as the British battleship Royal Oak had done two days before in the case of two Spanish refugee ships.

When the insurgent cruiser steamed close to the three ships the 5,886-ton French cruiser bluntly told the Cervera's commander to withdraw. The Bertin then moved close alongside the insurgent ship and remained there until the freighters were well on their way to France.

Close In On City.

Vitoria, Spain, May 9 (A.P.).—Gen. Emilio Nola's besieging insurgent army, closing relentlessly in on Bilbao, today had its outposts at several points less than 12 miles from the Basque capital.

Insurgent officers said their forces had only one more mountain range, that of Biscargi, to capture before marching into Bilbao itself.

At Gen. Mola's headquarters here it was announced yesterday's drive had smashed through the Basques' ring of trenches and fortifications in the Mount Sollube sector, northeast of Bilbao. In that action the Basque losses were estimated at 400 dead and 1,600 wounded or captured.

Franco Protests British Aid.

Salamanca, (Monday) May 10 (U.P.).—Rebel Gen. Francisco Franco today protested to Great Britain that her aid in the evacuation of Bilbao was without historical precedent and therefore "unacceptable."

The protest, delivered to Sir Henry G. Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain, now in Hendaye, France, temporary embassy quarters, said the use of British warships in helping the removal of thousands of women and children "interferes with war operations."

The protest was expected to be followed by direct action to prevent the refugee vessels from getting through.

Paintings Added To Mellon Group For D. C. Gallery

A number of rare masterpieces have been acquired and added to Andrew Mellon's great $50,000,000 art collection in recent weeks, The Post learned last night.

The identity of the old masters that Mr. Mellon has purchased since he offered his collection to the Nation could not be determined last night. David Finley, secretary to Mr. Mellon, said that a complete new list would be made public later.

Like those already listed, the new acquisitions will go into the National Art Gallery which is to be erected here.

Yesterday, however, the privilege was enjoyed by a group of men best qualified to adjudge their merit—some 25 members of the Art Museum Directors, who last week held their national convention here.

These visitors were invited to view not only the Mellon paintings stored in the Corcoran Art Gallery, but those in Mellon's apartment on Massachusetts avenue.

Group Said to Be in Touch With Agent at Valladolid.

Accusation Names Men Highly Placed

Diplomatic Passport's Abuse Will Be Investigated.

By Liam Lenihan.

Copyright, 1937, by The Washington Post.

A "sweeping" Congressional investigation of alleged foreign espionage activities in America will be demanded today or Tuesday on the floor of the Senate by Senator Gerald P. Nye, The Post was informed yesterday.

Documents just brought to light and now in the hands of the Senator prompted the North Dakotan to prepare his resolution calling for an investigation of all such activities and calling for an end to the "abuse" of the diplomatic passport."

An armed blockade of Mexican waters in violation of the Monroe Doctrine was urged in one document.

The alleged espionage ring, named in the papers, has its headquarters in New York's Ritz-Carlton. It is reported to embrace the United States, Cuba, Mexico and France and to maintain direct communication with a Spanish rebel agent at Valladolid.

High Spaniards Named.

The documents named a number of Spaniards, holding high positions at one time in their embassy here, and indicated they may be working on behalf of the rebel junta at Burgos.

Named in the documents on which were based the charges of an underground spy system using a code, were:

Juan Francisco de Cardenas, former Spanish Ambassador to the United States;

Miguel Echegaray, Agricultural attache here for six years;

Jose de Gregorio, a former Secretary;

T. Manteos, one-time chancellor of the embassy.

All four held diplomatic passports despite the fact they do not represent the Spanish government and all maintain headquarters at the Ritz-Carlton the documents purported to show.

Ship Firm Accused.

Another charge based on the documents was:

That the firm of Garcia and Diaz, steamship agents and operators at 17 Battery place, New York City, and former agents of the Spanish Line, wrote Senor Juan Claudio Guell, emissary of the Rebel Junta at Valladolid, March 5, decrying the lack of an armed blockade of the Strait of Yucatan.

Such a blockade would prevent the Mexican government from supplying munitions to Loyalist Spain, as allowed under international law. If enforced, it would bring the Spanish war dangerously close to American waters and might lead this Government to enforce its traditional Monroe Doctrine.

The letter, written over the signature of a Manuel Diaz and a Marcelino Garcia, supposedly partners of the New York shipping firm, reads in part:

"It is a pity that there is not a speedy armed ship in the Strait of Yucatan. If there were, not one of the ships with armaments would get through. The place could not be more advantageous because for the provisioning of its needs the ship could be helped in

Peace Depends Upon Italy, Mussolini Roars to 500,000

Il Duce in Angry Mood; Relations With London Believed More Strained Than at Any Time Since Ethiopian War.

By the United Press.

Rome, May 9.—Premier Benito Mussolini, his anti-British anger at high pitch, roared to the world today from the balcony of Venice Palace that European peace depends upon "the warnings from the profound conscience of the Italian people."

Foreign diplomats among 500,000 cheering Italians jamming the palace square in celebration of the first anniversary of their African conquest believed that Il Duce's words were directed to Great Britain.

Mussolini said Italy wanted peace —"peace for us and for all, if they will listen to the warnings which come from the profound conscience of the Italian people."

He turned to a defense of Italy's "mission of civilization" in Africa.

Il Duce's speech followed by 24 hours his order to Italian newspaper correspondents to leave London and hurry home. All but three British newspapers were banned in Italy.

Diplomats believed Italo-British relations were more strained than at any time since Italy's Ethiopian conquest menaced British naval dominance in the Mediterranean and Red seas.

Many predicted it might lead to expulsion of British newspaper correspondents from Italy. They said Il Duce would not take such a step

Wheeler Maps Action; Committee Showdown Is Expected.

By Russell Smith

As President Roosevelt neared the end of his Gulf Coast fishing trip, the fight over his court revision proposals was complicated further last night by the statement of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, that enemies of the plan will filibuster "all summer" against even a two-justice increase in the Supreme Court.

Since Wheeler is regarded as speaking authoritatively for the opposition to the plan, it appeared the President will be confronted with one of the gravest decisions of his Administration when he reaches here Friday.

The President is represented here as unshaken in his intention to press the issue on his original recommendation to Congress. There was speculation among members of Congress, however, as to whether he will change this view after he talks to advisers on Capitol Hill on his return.

During the last week the opposition has stiffened noticeably, this trend being indicated notably in the case which Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, made out against the plan. O'Mahoney spoke more in sorrow than wrath, but this very fact was cited yesterday as proof of the difficult

Reich Cancels Zeppelin Trips; Awaits Hindenburg Blast Data

Berlin, May 9 (U.P.).—Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goeting, of the German air ministry, tonight suspended all flights of the dirigible Graf Zeppelin pending a report from the German commission en route to the United States to investigate the Hindenburg disaster.

The Graf Zeppelin arrived at Friedrichshafen yesterday from Rio de Janeiro. Passengers were unaware of the Hindenburg disaster at Lakehurst, N. J., until a few hours before their arrival in Germany.

The German commission, which sailed from Cherbourg, France, last night aboard the Europa, is headed by Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zeppelin's designer.

Mrs. Ernst Lehmann, widow of the former skipper of the Hindenburg, who died at Lakewood, N. J., Friday night of burns, also is aboard the Europa.

Navy Inquiry Delayed.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 9 (A.P.).—A Commerce Department inquiry was given precedence today in moves to clear up the cause of the Hindenburg distaster as a naval board the fire first appeared.

delayed its own investigation into the dirigible wreck which cost 35 lives.

Hearings by both three-man boards had been called to start at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Capt. Gordon W. Haines, named head of the naval inquiry, announced this afternoon that his investigation would be delayed until completion of the Commerce Department inquiry.

Among the most important witnesses were expected to be Rudolph Sauter, chief engineer, and two members of his staff who were in a rear fin of the ship near where the fire first appeared.

Hull Is Thought Likely Receiver Of Nobel Prize

Held to Have Done Most for World Peace by Trade Policy.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull is being put forward by his friends as the logical candidate for the next Nobel peace award, the United Press said last night in a copyright dispatch.

Those who understand Hull's foreign policy, particularly with respect to world trade, believe he has done more than any other individual in the world to re-establish and maintain world peace. They credit him not only with having introduced the "Golden Rule" as the yardstick of foreign policy but also with having conscientiously observed that rule.

The name of President Roosevelt was energetically put forward at the recent Buenos Aires Peace Conference as the most likely recipient of the next Nobel peace award, and the Cuban government has formally suggested his name. Hull's friends say he would actively and honestly support his chief for the award, but they suggest that Hull is really the moving figure behind the United States' foreign policy of reciprocal treatment of and by all nations, and that he should be the person to receive the award.

His Policy Is Keystone.

They cite Hull's record in public service for a quarter of a century. It is one of never-ending effort toward free-flowing international trade among all nations and equal treatment of all nations by all others. This is considered the keystone of the Administration's foreign policy.

President Roosevelt, only a few days after his inauguration, proclaimed to the world that his Administration would be a "good neighbor" to all nations.

The "good neighbor" he defined as a nation which minds its own business, places and keeps its own political and economic house in order, observers the right of all nations to conduct their own domestic business in such manner as they see fit; refrains from intervening in the affairs of other nations, and keeps its troops within its territorial boundaries; grants equal treatment to the goods and produces of all other nations, and seeks like treatment for its own products.

Cited by eLague.

All of these points Hull had stood for over a long period.

Some months ago the League of Nations committee cited Hull's reciprocal trade program as the most practical plan yet put forward for international economic recovery. Great Britain, France and Belgium now have taken up his suggestions that small, regional trade pacts be worked out, later to be expanded as other nations adhere to them, as the foundation upon which a general European peace can be constructed.

Man, Shot Twice In Head, Survives, Amazing Doctors

Roy Edgar Miskell, 45, assistant superintendent at the Masonic Temple, was alive in Casualty Hospital last night nearly 12 hours after he was found in the basement of his home at 325 Kentucky avenue southeast with two bullets in his head.

Physicians, amazed at the tenacity with which Miskell, brother of Park Police Sergt. H. T. Miskell, clung to life, said his condition was grave.

The sound of two shots early yesterday brought Miskell's wife, Mrs. Flossie Miskell, from the upper floors of the house to the basement, where she found her husband. A revolver, from which two shots had been fired, was found nearby, police said.

Police said Miskell was shot on each side of the head. Sergt. Miskell said his brother had suffered a succession of illnesses for five weeks and that he had been despondent.

Miskell is the father of three children, a married daughter, Melba, another daughter and Egar.

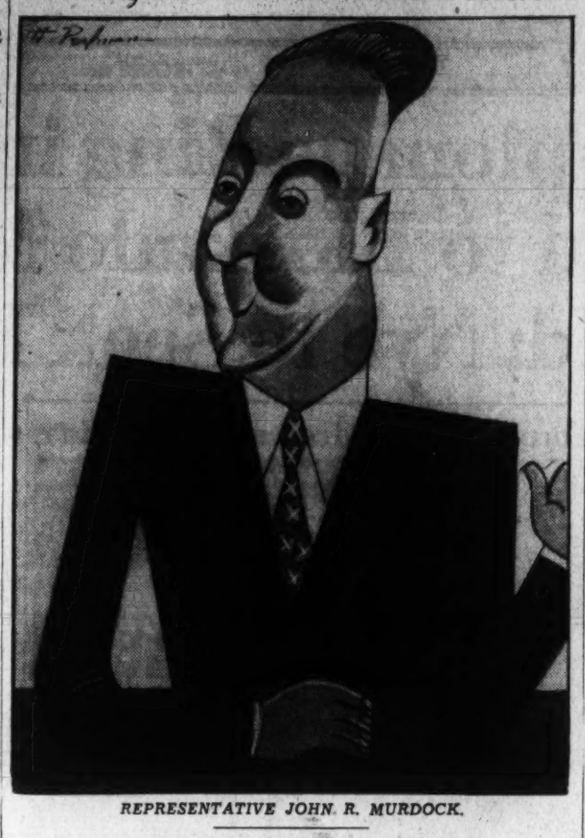
Rep. Murdock Not Sold on Court Plan, but Will Back President



REPRESENTATIVE JOHN R. MURDOCK.

By Liam Lenihan.

Carefully weighing his words in the best acedemic manner, professorial-looking John Robert Murdock, Representative-at-Large from Arizona, swung around to face his questioner and said, "By the eternal gods, it's different."

For 22 years, the staid, unflurried, 52-year-old legislator who calls himself "a freshman in a new college," taught history and political science in his home State's three institutions of higher learning before entering politics.

Expert on American history and government—he is the author of several school textbooks—Murdock hews to the philosophy of "helping the other fellow," but disclaims any liaison with "brain trusters."

Best Plan Offered.

The Representative from Arizona admitted he was not "any too hilarious" about the court reform program, but added he would back the Rooseveltian measure since no suitable alternative had been proposed.

"I trust the President and cannot bring myself to give any credence to the charges that he is attempting to become a dictator," he said. "While I can see some danger of the President's controlling the high court through a certain use of appointive power, at least there is nothing unconstitutional about it. On the other hand, I see even greater danger for this country in our legislative supineness and impotency caused by the court's medieval interpretation of the Constitution. This might conceivably bring about such a state of affairs as can only be dealt with by extra-legal or revolutionary means. We can lose our liberties through a single dictatorship, and just as surely through a plural dictatorship."

Industry, Farm Loans by Banks Show Increase

Federal Reserve Board's Data Reveal Gains in All Borrowings.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board called attention yesterday to the growing volume of bank loans for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes.

The board's monthly bulletin said decreases since the first of the year in bank holdings of Government securities "have been accompnaied by an increase in all types of loans. * * * Most of the increase in bank loans has reflected extension of credit for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes, as indicated by a further growth in so-called 'other' loans and by increased holdings of open-market paper.

"During the past year so-called 'other' loans which may be considered as roughly indicative of the extension of bank credit for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes, have increased steadily, except for a decline in January of this year.

"From early February to April 21 their growth amounted to $360,000,000, about half of which was in New York City, and the other half spread over all the Federal Reserve districts."

The board announced that henceforth member banks will be asked for separate reports on commercial, industrial and agricultural loans instead of mingling them with other items. The revised bank condition statement will make its first appearance following the week of May 12.

In a survey of business conditions the board said March industrial activity and employment continued to increase in March, the volume of unfilled orders on producers' books remained at a high level, and commodity prices showed a further marked advance.

During April, the board said, prices of commodities traded in on organized exchanges "declined considerably" both here and abroad, and the general level of domestic prices decreased slightly. Industrial production continued at about the March level.

Officials Refuse To Act for Cupid

By the Associated Press.

The Interior Department, denying it had any connection with Cupid, respectfully declined today to help a young Midwestern woman get herself a sweetheart.

Officials pondered long over an answer, then decided a matter-of-fact denial was the only way out. Here's what confronted them:

"I have heard there was a branch connected with the Interior Department that was designated (sic) to Cupid. Now if this is so, I wish to have you place my name and description on record so that any inquiring male of like description who may be interested will be referred to me.

"I am 27 years of age, am 5 feet 3 inches tall weight 135 pounds, am good looking, neat. I like music, books and the out-of-doors."

Memorial to Jefferson Davis Is Contemplated by Congress

Bill Passed by House Would Permit Erection Marker in Capital, at Highway's End, by Daughters of Confederacy.

By the Associated Press.

Congress is contemplating authorization of a memorial to Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America—the marker to be erected in the Capital of the Union he once opposed.

Plans for the memorial already are being drafted by several interested governmental agencies. A bill to permit the Daughters of the Confederacy to erect "a suitable marker" at the terminus of the Jefferson Davis national highway has passed the House and awaits Senate action.

A statue of Davis, as a representative of Mississippi, his native State, stands in "Statuary Hall" in the Capitol, but no formal memorial has been erected in Washington for the man who served in the United States Cabinet, the Senate and the Army.

Under provisions of the bill introduced by Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, the memorial marker is to be erected on a site to be selected by the director of the National Park Service, with approval of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission.

The bill specifies that the site shall not be on the grounds of the Capitol, White House or Library of Congress.

The final design is subject to approval by the National Commission of Fine Arts. Commission officials said today that no design had yet been submitted.

After his graduation from West Point in 1828, Davis served in the Black Hawk Indian War for two years. When the Mexican War broke out he was in Congress, but immediately resigned to command the first regiment of Mississippi Riflemen. He saw action at Monterey and Buena Vista.

Davis was Secretary of War in the Administration of President Pierce (1853-1857), and served two terms in the United States Senate (1847-1851 and 1857-1861). He withdrew with other Southern Senators on January 21, 1861, and the next year became President of the Confederacy.

Davis was captured by Union troops at Irwinsville, Ga., in May, 1865. His indictment on a treason charge ended with an order of nolle prosequi in December, 1868.

Defense Cost Low For U. S. Citizens

By the Associated Press.

A chart of world powers' army expenditures compiled by American military authorities indicated yesterday Americans pay substantially less per capita for national defense than citizens of any other major nation.

Every man, woman and child in the United States, the chart showed, would have to contribute $3 annually to pay, clothe and feed the Army and provide it with weapons of war if individual assessments were made.

The per capita cost of the armies of other world powers is: Great Britain, $19.30; France, $17.40; Italy, $9.30; Russia, $23.34, and Japan, $4.80. Germany's per capita cost is unknown but estimated to rank at least with France.

Because Germany maintains strict secrecy concerning its military and naval expenditures, the cost of its regular army of 760,000 men and 1,368,000 reserves cannot be computed by authorities here. They estimate, however, that under the stimulus of the European armaments race the Hitler government currently is spending approximately 67 per cent of its total budget on national defense.

Quads' Doctor Brings Presents on Birthday

Clifton, N. J. May 9 (AP).—Dr. Frank Jani, who delivered four tiny mites just a year ago, visited four husky babies today and gave all the Kasper quadruplets presents for their first birthday.

All kinds of presents—four elaborate play-boxes, toys, dresses, sweaters and jewelry—came for the quads, mostly from strangers.

185 Planes to Bomb Dry Lake in Desert

Muroc Dry Lake, Calif., May 9 (AP).—This desert stronghold, representing theoretically the city of Los Angeles, becomes the object of a relentless assault from the air tomorrow.

Sweeping in from the North, an aerial armada of 185 bombers, attack ships and observers will strike with live bombs and gas. The invaders will roar toward Muroc Dry Lake from six different bases at a "zero hour" known only to them. Strict "wartime" secrecy cloaks moves of attacking and defending forces in the Army's war games.

The attacking warbirds are commanded by Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Brant, of Langley Field, Va. All last week, hundreds of aircraft and thousands of men flew into southern California from the North, East and South.

3d Degree Trial Opens.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 9 (AP).—Seven former Hot Springs policemen will face trial here tomorrow on charges that "third degree" methods used in the city jail caused the death last December of John Dickson, alleged truck thief. The men will be tried jointly on charges of second degree murder.

Mystery Cloaks Blonde Co-ed's Disappearance

By the Associated Press.

Delaware, Ohio, May 9.—The mystery of Ohio Wesleyan University's missing blonde co-ed, Ruth Baumgardner, 22, appeared no nearer solution tonight than when the pretty senior disappeared from her dormitory room last Tuesday night.

The girls' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Baumgardner, of Lakewood, Ohio, spent Mother's Day with friends at nearby Worthington, waiting in vain for news of their daughter.

Police and the girl's parents declined to offer any theory until some definite clew was uncovered. Friends of the girl said she apparently was happy and doing well in her studies.

Heavy rain today prevented an extensive search in the vicinity of Delaware, planned by Boy Scouts and members of the student body of 1,300.

Little credence was given a report by a Worthington (Ohio) barber that he had seen a girl answering Miss Baumgardner's description Wednesday noon on the highway near that village.

None of the missing co-ed's fellow students or fellow members of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority had seen her since Tuesday evening. Her disappearance was reported Wednesday afternoon after she failed to attend classes.

Miss Goldie McCue, assistant dean of women, in charge of Austin Hall, a girls' dormitory where Miss Baumgardner lived, described the missing coed as a model, normal girl," and said she could not advance any reason for the disappearance.

Police said their investigations disclosed that the girl had not attended chapel exercises at the university for seven days prior to her disappearance, and said this fact indicated the girl had something on her mind, or was "worried about something."

The students are permitted but 15 "cuts" for an entire school year, and police said the girl would not have incurred 7 "cuts" in a row unless she was "worried about something."

Both police and Miss McCue said they leaned toward a theory that Miss Baumgardner had disappeared voluntarily.

Rift Threatens Travel Tie-up For Coronation

Striking Busmen May Call on Trolley Workers to Help Snarl Traffic.

Queen Elizabeth to their coronation will be like.

The outpouring was the largest crowd in London since the funeral of King George V 16 months ago, a vast assortment of shivering, bedraggled but happy human beings who cheered wildly at the sight of the empty gilded coach of state and the various mounted military contingents.

It provided an excellent preview of the throngs that will swarm through London on coronation day, three days off.

Last night the police had difficulty clearing a way through the London crowds for the King and Queen as they returned by automobile from Windsor, where they had been resting for the arduous week ahead.

At the palace their majesties welcomed several royal guests arriving from abroad for the coronation, and were hosts at an informal dinner attended by visiting royalty and the King's brothers, the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, and their wives.

Outside the palace gates about 30,000 persons gathered.

Queen Maud of Norway and Mother Mary, driving to the palace for the dinner, also had difficulty making a way through the throngs.

The rain had kept King George and Queen Elizabeth indoors at Windsor during the day.

For the coronation rehearsal thousands stayed up all night to make sure of vantage points. With the bus strike still in progress many walked miles for the chance to see and to get soaked to the skin.

By 6 a. m., the streets along the route were black with men, women and children huddled under newspapers, blankets, wraps and umbrellas, but who joked, laughed and stamped their feet in efforts to relieve the monotony of the wait and the cold.

Revelers not yet home from the night clubs still in evening dress stood shoulder to shoulder with weary scrubwomen, while an army of police strove to keep order.

People stood on the roofs of marooned taxis and automobiles, climbed trees and flagpoles and flooded into the decorated grandstands, to which they were admitted for threepence (6 cents) as against the big money Wednesday's spectators will have to pay.

Never has there been a larger crowd here for a more empty show. Instead of a full-dress rehearsal down the Mall and Whitehall, with the soldiers wearing scarlet tunics, shining breastplates and nodding plumes—as they will Wednesday—the spectators saw khaki-clad soldiers and coachmen wearing raincoats and Indian troops under soggy turbans.

The gold state coach looked tarnished in the rain. The street decorations dripped and some colors ran. But the crowds cheered as though they were witnessing the dawn of a new world.

Dozen Hurt in Clash

Budapest, May 9 (AP).—A dozen persons, including several women, were hurt today in a street clash, when, police said, members of the "Arrow and Cross" Nazi Association attacked a strolling group of their opponents. Several persons were cut by hatchets. Police held two whom they said were among the attackers.

Legislative, Better Housing Parleys Planned by President

Executive Outlines Plans for Activities on Return at Press Conference; Will Do Last Fishing Today; Starts Home Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

Galveston, Tex., May 9.—President Roosevelt cruised leisurely up the Gulf Coast today toward Freeport, where he will do his last fishing tomorrow before starting back to Washington.

He said he intended spending the day resting and signing mail the local postmaster took to him yesterday on the 231-mile auto ride to Port Aransas.

Reporters also went along for the firts press conference of the trip. They had to wait more than two hours while the "First Fisherman" of the land played a 5-foot 2-inch, 77-pound tarpon to gaff. It was left for mounting and will be given to Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son.

Replying to a running-fire of questions, the President said he planned general legislative and housing conferences on his return to Washington Friday; that he was uncertain whether he would send a Nation-wide power development message to Congress soon, and that the Hindenburg disaster should not hinder further study of lighter-than-air safety devices. He added he was not certain whether he had the authority under existing law to lift restrictions on sale and export of the nonexplosive helium gas to insure greater safety to foreign commercial dirigible travel. He will talk this over with Washington authorities when he returns.

Extensive preparations were under way here today for the President's disembarkation Tuesday morning.

Five hundred regulars from Fort Crockett and two companies of Marine Corps Reserves will be on duty along the route the President will follow through the city en route to his special train.

The President will make a few informal remarks from his car before leaving for Washington via Houston, College Station and Fort Worth, Tex. He will spend Tuesday night at the home of his son, Elliott, in the latter city, and leave for Washington the evening of Wednesday.

Plane Plants Swamped With AdvanceOrders

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—American aircraft manufacturers who worried the last few years about getting orders for their products have new worries today—how to fill the orders they have on hand.

An unprecedented wave of buying by domestic airlines, renewed interest of private individuals in purchasing and flying their own craft, and the European armament race have all contributed to the condition which for the first time in years has brought a flush of health to this country's aeronautical industry.

Orders Pile Up.

From the larger plants producing commercial airliners or giant war craft come reports of advance orders sufficient to keep all workmen busy for months. And smaller shops—those that turn out no more than two or three tiny planes a week—are also busy, as the buying bug hits less wealthy but more plentiful private pilots.

The reason, representatives of the industry explain, is twofold: The asserted leadership of the United States in the design and production of commercial planes for private or transport use, and the inability of foreign buyers to obtain equipment from European factories whose outputs are devoted entirely to building fleets of war birds.

During the first three months of 1937, said the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce today, sales of American aircraft, aircraft engines, and spare parts totaled $20,496,517, an increase of 67.9 per cent over the similar period of last year.

Three Months' Record.

A total of 392 commercial aircraft, valued at $4,322,262, were delivered to owners in the last three months, said the chamber's survey, as against 183 machines worth $1,519,605 in the first quarter of 1936. The remainder of the January, February and March output consisted of military aircraft and equipment.

Ninety-six military aircraft were delivered by American manufacturers to this and other governments, 171 in the first quarter of 1936, but the value of military production rose from $3,137,047 in the first three months of 1936 to $4,759,454 in the similar portion of this year.

Endless Chain.

The business of manufacturing transport planes—in which American builders have invaded the Holland, Polish, German, French, Swiss, Swedish and even the English markets, seems to be sort of an endless chain affair, aviation experts explained.

"Operators are constantly calling for faster, bigger, safer, more economic equipment," they said. "And as long as the manufacturers can supply the desired planes and engines they are assured of more orders than they can fill."

Florida, was to serve in the same capacity on the trip over and back.

The ship was loaded with about 1,200 gallons of gas.

A crowd of about 5,000 watched the departure, with ambulances, fire engines and emergency rescue squads standing by.

The plane, bought from Harold Vanderbilt, carried twin 450-horsepower engines, an automatic pilot, a gyro-compass and two way radio.

Weather conditions were reported favorable, with a constant tail wind of 25 miles an hour in prospect. Rain sqalls off Ireland were expected to pass before Merrill and Lambie reached there.

The fliers were dressed in business suits. They took only tomato juice, sandwiches and coffee and a collapsible rubber board.

If completed, the flight will be the thirty-fourth transatlantic airplane nonstop crossing, and the second round trip flight. The first round trip was made last fall by Merrill and Harry Richman, singer.

New York Pastor Calls Free 'Taxi' Service Success

North White Plains, N. Y., May 9 (AP).—The Rev. David Wesley Soper beamed down on several new faces in his congregation at the Methodist Episcopal Church today and pronounced his free "taxi" service a success.

The 26-year-old clergyman announced last week he would provide transportation to and from the church to anyone who requested it.

About 25 persons took advantage of the offer, most of them members of the Sunday school class. A dozen young men members volunteered to act as chauffeurs.

Widow Starves 2 Weeks With Husband's Corpse

Fairfax, Calif., May 9. (AP).—For two weeks Fred Roche lay dead in his home, authorities reported today, while his widow sat on the kitchen floor and "lived on water and cigarettes."

Coroner J. Ray Keaton said the widow apparently deranged by grief, was found sitting in a circle of cigarette stubs. The body of Roche, 45-year-old unemployed laborer, who Keaton said died from natural causes, was lying on a couch. Mrs. Roche was taken to the detention home.

6 Students Killed As Bus and Truck Collide in Florida

By the Associated Press.

Chattahoochee, Fla., May 9.—Six high school boys from Greensboro, Fla., were killed in a collision of their school bus and a motor truck near here last midnight.

All were members of the Greensboro Club of Future Farmers of America. The boys were returning from a convention trip to Marianna when the bus and the flat-bottomed body of the truck sidewiped.

The dead were Francis Sheppard, 16; Edwin Walker, 17; Harry Van Landingham, 14; Hugh Eubanks, 17; Russell Rowan, 15, and his cousin, Bernard Rowan, 15.

Two others, Mack Sheppard and Henry Dones, were near death at the Florida State Hospital here.

Members of the party said about 35 boys were in the bus, which was being driven by Thomas Smith. Seats were placed lengthwise along both sides of the bus and through the center.

The left side of the bus was torn out, but the driver was not injured.

"It was terrible," said Sam Smith, his brother, who suffered a slight head injury.

"I was sitting in the back of the bus on the side where the truck hit. I didnn't see it coming and didn't know anything about it until it hit us. We were on our side of the road. * * * Some of the boys were screaming about their brothers being killed."

Plane, Carrying 2 Americans, Found In Guiana Jungle

Caracas, Benezuela, May 9 (U.P.).—An airliner which crashed April 23 with nine persons, including two Americans, aboard was sighted today by Henry S. Villard, second secretary of the American Legation here. He dropped food and medicine to the survivors.

The ship's copilot, radio operator and a passenger who escaped unhurt had reported the accident after they had beaten their way through the thick underbrush of the Guiana jungles.

Among the passengers were Frederic D. Grab, commercial attache of the American legation, and William Armstrong Perry, correspondent for the New York Times. Perry's condition was said to be critical.

Villard said he sighted three men near the wreckage.

Rail Victim Identified.

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP).—District Attorney James A. Reilly, of Fayette County, will go on trial in Pittsburgh Criminal Court tomorrow on a charge of murder. The attorney is the third to be tried in the death of Frank C. Monaghan, 64, Uniontown hotel keeper. Monaghan died after being questioned in Fayette County courthouse about a stabbing. Rebel Spy Ring Active in U. S., Report Charges

Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, a friendly country."

The documents also purport to show that the firm of Garcia and Diaz kept a Spanish rebel agent in Vera Cruz, Mexico, informed of the movements of the ill-fated Mar Cantabrico.

The Mar Cantabrico, which was the last ship to slip out of the United States before the neutrality act became law, later was captured by rebel warships in the Bay of Biscay. It carried a consignment of airplanes and airplane parts for the Spanish government. Its cargo and departure had been the cause of much Congressional discussion of neutrality legislation.

On February 20, Manuel Diaz wrote Don Federico Varela, the rebel agent at Vera Cruz, thanking him for the information regarding the Vera Cruz sailing date of the Mar Cantabrico, the letter shown to Senator Nye said.

The letter added:

"I appreciate your cablegram . . . which I at once passed on to the person who is to warn our government in Spain so that they will be watching the arrival of this ship at those shores."

A spokesman for the Garcia and Diaz shipping firm, told of the charges by The Post, said, "It's impossible to say anything just now. Tomorrow maybe, but not now."

Indicative of the struggle now going on between both Spanish factions for ownership of freighters of the Spanish Line are further alleged letters from Manuel Diaz to rebel agents in Spain. On one, dated Havana, the writer says:

"It is unfortunate that the politics here go hand in hand with the nationalist campaign in Spain and until recognition comes I don't think anything radical will be done. * * * It was marvelous about the 'Comillas' (captured by the rebels) and I hope that when the 'Motomar' sails they will do the same thing to it and that they will hang the bandit Dicenta (the captain) from the mast, not to mention the first engineer Bilbao."

Senator Nye said that in offering his resolution today he will present the documents to show the need for such an investigation. He said he was "impressed" by the evidence therein.

Must Be "On Guard."

"The United States needs to be thoroughly on guard against activities which might have a tendency to make this country a party to an international situation that would be anything but to our credit," he declared. "If there is abuse of the privileges of the diplomatic passport, as these documents would tend to show, then we ought to undertake a sweeping investigation at once."

Former Ambassador Cardenas' name was mentioned in the alleged correspondence between Victor Alvarez, naturalized American citizen and officer in the shipping line, and Manuel Diaz.

Referring to a meeting at Fordham University, one letter states:

"There was not an empty seat in the entire hall. The historian, Hilaire Belloc, since he speaks with an English accent, could not be understood very well, but the Jesuit, Jaime Castiello, speaks perfect English and he was wonderful. Later, a certain Rogers, a journalist who has just returned after seven months in Spain, where he went as a 'loyalist,' said that such were the things that he saw there that he decided to go to nationalist territory, and he says that the contrast was tremendous. Marcelino (Garcia) has already spoken with Cardenas in order to obtain these speeches."

Asked by The Post if he carried a diplomatic passport, Senor Cardenas at his suite in the Ritz-Carlton last night replied:

"I have nothing to say."

Ex-Ambassador Named.

Another letter, presented as written by Marcelino Garcia to Countess Guell, wife of a rebel emissary now in Paris, names a former American ambassador to Spain, Ogden Hammond, in connection with the collection of funds for the rebels.

In part it reads:

"I commissioned a very trustworthy friend of absolute rightist leanings, to place the matter in the hands of Manolo Alonso (the tennis player), who is working assiduously together with others, among them the American ex-Ambassador, Mr. Ogden Hammond, to gather funds and adherents to the cause."

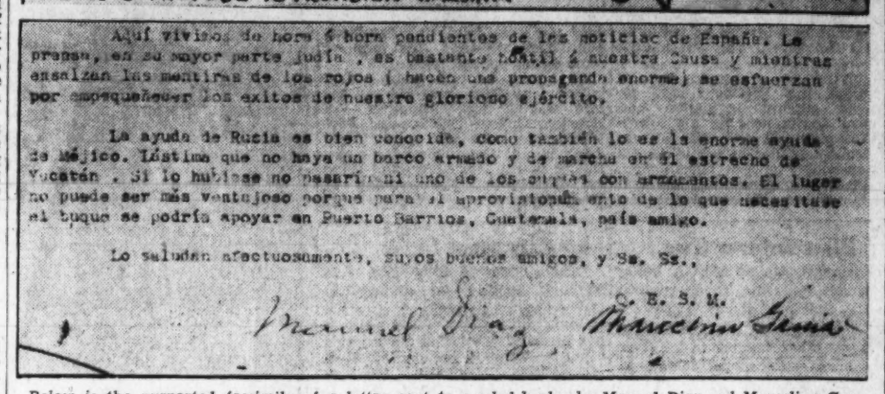
This letter was written last November before the neutrality act became law.

The official Spanish chamber of commerce, dissolved by the Spanish government last December, still functions and keeps its headquarters in the offices of Garcia and Diaz, the documents purported to prove.

Joaquin Sunye, secretary of the chamber for many years, has openly admitted his support of Gen. Franco and refused to resign his position when asked, it is charged.

Another Spaniard named is Ramon Castroviejo, well-known eye specialist and reputed friend of Franco. It is charged that he has made shipments of supplies in his own name to Amoedo, a former Spanish diplomat now in Lisbon and a member of the rebel junta there.

Loyalists Claim Rebels Urged Mexican Blockade



Aquí vivimos de hora á hora pendientes de las noticias de España. La prensa, en su mayor parte judía, es bastante hostil á nuestra causa y mientras ensalzan las mentiras de los rojos y hacen una propaganda enorme; se esforzan por empequeñecer los exitos de nuestro glorioso ejército.

La ayuda de Rusia es bien conocida, como también lo es la enorme ayuda de Méjico. Lástima que no haya un barco armado y de marcha en el estrecho de Yucatán. Si lo hubiese no pasaría ni uno de los cuatro con armamentos. El lugar no puede ser más ventajoso porque para el aprovisionamiento de lo que necesitase el buque se podría apoyar en Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, país amigo.

C. B. S. U.

Manuel Diaz Marcelino Garcia

Below is the purported facsimile of a letter sent to a rebel leader by Manuel Diaz and Marcelino Garcia. The last paragraph is translated: "The help from Russia is well known, as well as the enormous help from Mexico. It is a pity there is not a speedy ship in the strait of Yucatan. If there were, not one of the ships with armaments would get through. The place could not be any more advantageous because for the provisioning of its needs the ship could be helped in Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, a friendly country." Trotsky Inquiry To Be Continued, Committee Rules

New York, May 9 (AP).—An unofficial committee of inquiry which went to Mexico last month to question Leon Trotsky about the charges directed against him during the Moscow treason trials reported tonight that the exiled Russian had established a case "amply warranting further investigation."

The report was delivered by Prof. John Dewey, committee chairman, at a mass meeting in Mecca Temple sponsored by the American committee for the defense of Trotsky.

In addition to questioning the former Bolshevist leader orally, Dr. Dewey said he and his colleagues examined a mass of documentary evidence "purporting to refute the testimony given in the Moscow trials concerning his alleged conspirational contacts with the defendants."

"This record convinces us that Mr. Trotsky has established a case amply warranting further investigation," the report said. "Therefore we recommend that the work of this commission proceed to its conclusion."

Gourmets Shocked By Dr. Rosenbach

New York, May 9 (AP).—The Gourment Society, with its hoary traditions about the evil effects of tobacco and hard liquor on the diner's palate, almost gaped itself into indigestion at a dinner here tonight.

For the principal speaker, Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted Bibliophile, invited to discourse on rare and ancient cookbooks, opened up with a drink of Scotch whiskey instead of the traditional wine, lighted a cigar, took another jolt of Scotch and remarked:

"Anyone who likes to smoke should smoke when eating. It aids digestion. And for the Scotch, it's Scotland's gift to mankind."

Franco's Junta Rebuilds Spain Behind Armies

Business as Usual Is Rebel Slogan; Schools and Churches Crowded.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Salamanca, Spain, May 9—Travelers are astounded by the way insurgent-held Spain is living up to its behind-the-lines slogan under Generalissimo Francisco Franco, "Speed up reconstruction with business as usual."

The slogan is the keynote of a campaign started by Franco's newly established totalitarian state party to co-ordinate and mobilize the economic and social life of insurgent Spain along military lines.

The political junta named to organize the party announced it planned to build up insurgent Spain back of the battle lines through "vertical syndicates," and Franco's experts immediately set to work on details of the plan. The results are evident everywhere.

On the surface the only indications of war in most of the insurgent territory are propaganda posters, an increased number of men in uniform and black newspaper headlines.

Well-Stocked Stores Open.

In all of the large insurgent cities, including those near the front like Granada, Cordoba and Zaragoza, stores are open, the shelves are filled with supplies, there are plenty of clerks. All kinds of luxuries are available.

On Sundays, churches are crowded, although in some cities that felt the crush of war there are gaping shell holes in the roof and an almost complete lack of the usual sacred ornaments.

Throughout the week the movie houses are well filled.

I visited several schools behind the lines and found them functioning normally. A large number of children outside school hours participate in youth organizations of the Traditionalists or Falangists, which now are unified under the state party.

The main reason for the normal aspect of life under Franco appears to be the system of conscription. To date the only classes called for service in the regular army have been youths aged 21 to 27 inclusive. The first quarter of the 1938 class was called to the colors a few days ago.

In addition to the men mustered for service, thousands have joined the Falangists or Traditionalist militia, recently combined as an auxiliary army.

Women Take Up Work.

Others responded to posters plastered on walls throughout Franco's territory, saying: "The Foreign Legion waits for you." They signed up for the duration of the war or for periods of years.

The rule for insurgent Spain's families, however, sems to be that the bread winner must remain at home. Women have taken up work which in some cases was barred to them by tradition before the war.

unless he abandoned all hopes for a reconciliation with Britain.

The breaking off of press relations was blamed on British newspaper criticisms of Italy's military role in Spain and aspersions cast on the bravery of Italian soldiers.

Because today's celebration was to commemorate Italy's annexation of Ethiopia, only Germany and Japan, who have recognized King Victor Emmanuel as King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia, sent ambassadors.

U. S. Representation.

Great Britain, the United States and France were represented by military and naval attaches.

Mussolini and the King reviewed 40,000 metropolitan and colonial troops and 10,000 native Ethiopian soldiers from Eritrea, Lybia and Somaliland.

Ouster for Britisher?

Rome, May 9 (AP).—Premier Benito Mussolini's bitter campaign against the British press today appeared about to be carried further as informed Fascist quarters said one British correspondent had been designated for expulsion from Italy because of the nature of his recent dispatches.

Decision Set Friday Over Closing Stores

A final decision on closing on Wednesday afternoons throughout the year is expected to be reached Friday, when representatives of local chain groceries meet to report the results of a poll.

The question was discussed Friday at a meeting of representatives of the larger chain and independent stores in Washington and nearby.

According to Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, a majority of the store managers present were in favor of the plan to give employes a half-day's holiday each week. Since adoption of the plan hinges on its approval by most of the stores, it was decided to have volunteer chain representatives poll their membership this week.

invest in America's finest motor car at this year's low prices

THIS YEAR'S Packard Twelves and Packard Super Eights are beyond doubt the finest cars Packard has ever built—the finest motor cars America has ever seen.

They are selling now at the lowest prices such magnificent cars have ever sold for.

But . . . we think it obvious that, in view of rising labor and material costs throughout industry, this year's low prices cannot obtain for any certainty of time—particularly in the case of big, fine, luxury cars.

That is why we feel we should remind you that now is patently the most advantageous time to get in your order for your new Packard Twelve or Packard Super Eight. Purchasing at today's low prices should give you a very worth while bargain.

So we urge you to act now—and secure at present low prices the one car that offers you two lives . . . extraordinarily long mechanical life and long enduring style life.

Steel Workers Strike Threat Is Spreading

25,000 Jones-Laughlin Employes May Quit Wednesday.

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP).—Two union mass meetings voted loudly tonight in favor of a strike in the two mills of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation next Wednesday at 11 p. m., unless the company signs a labor contract with the steel workers' organizing committee.

Approximately 25,000 men are employed at the plants, located in the south side of Pittsburgh and at Aliquippa, Pa., down the Ohio River about 18 miles.

Critical Situation.

Union leaders, in the absence of Philip Murray, chairman of the workers' committee, described the situation as "growing critical" and said similar strike movement is gaining rapidly among their members employed by Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Bethlehem.

These three concerns, along with Jones & Laughlin, produce about one-third of the Nation's steel and employ almost 200,000 workmen.

Action Approved.

Union locals of the Republic and Youngstown employes already have voted to give Murray and his committee, a unit of the Committee for Industrial Organization, the power to call a strike at his discretion.

This was granted last week after the two companies informed Murray they would not sign a contract similar to the ones signed by U. S. Steel's producing units and approximately 100 other smaller concerns.

clared unfair and a strike will be called against it."

When Montgomery completed his statement in the stadium, virtually everyone leaped to his feet, cheering and applauding. Among those in the speakers' stand who smiled broadly and led in the applause were Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Frank Morgan, Ralph Morgan and Jean Hersholt.

The threat of action against individual studios which failed to fall in line with the majority accepting the guild's demands for a closed shop and benefits to extra and bit players remained.

"We have an agreement with producers, but it has not yet been committed to a full contract," Montgomery told the guild.

"The ballots of the senior guild members have given the board of directors the power to call a strike by 96 per cent in this emergency. We must have this weapon in our hands."

There was another shout of acclaim when Montgomery announced the $3.20 a day minimum for extra players had been abolished and there would be a $5.50 minimum for extras doing "mob stuff." He said extras getting $7.50 to $15 a day would receive a 10 per cent increase and that records of the central casting bureau henceforth would be open to the guild.

Express Crashes Into Freight Train; 15 Persons Injured

Elizabethtown, Pa., May 9 (AP).—The Merchantile Express of the Pennsylvania Railroad, bound from St. Louis to New York, crashed into the rear of a halted freight train today, injuring 15 passengers and derailing five empty freight cars.

The express returned to Harrisburg, where the injured were treated by physicians. All were able to continue to New York. Other through trains were rerouted after short delays.

Railroad officials could not give a cause for the accident.

Charles W. Bryan Quitting Politics

Lincoln, Nebr., May 9 (AP).—Mayor Charles W. Bryan, last of the "Bryan dynasty" in American politics, said today he is "calling it quits."

His career as a public official will end tomorrow when the new executive, Oren S. Copeland, takes office.

Bryan made his debut in politics as Lincoln's mayor in 1915 at a time when he had become widely known in Lincoln as the business partner of his illustrious brother, the late William Jennings Bryan.

He rose to Governor, Vice Presidential candidate in 1924, unsuccessful candidate for Governor three times, then Governor twice, candidate for United States Senator, and finally, in 1935, mayor again.

"I'm retiring to take up farming," Bryan said. "Hereafter government will be just a hobby." He declined to run again in the recent election.

Union Accepts Packard Pact; Picks U.A.W.A.

Agreement Effective for One Year; Election Held Under Wagner Act.

Detroit, May 9 (AP).—Union employes tonight ratified an agreement in which the Packard Motor Car Co. recognized the United Automobile Workers as the sole bargaining agent for its hourly rate employes.

The pact, effective until May 1, 1938, is the first exclusive recognition given the U. A. W. A. by a major automobile producer.

Terms of the agreement, made public after the ratification vote, include vacations with pay, shop steward systems to handle employe grievances, and a wage increase of 3 cents an hour for all hourly rated employes on May 16.

The union promised not to permit any strikes "or any other interference or any other stoppage, total or partial, of any of the company's operations" for the year.

Some 14,000 Packard employes, in the industry's first Wagner act election, voted 4 to 1 recently to be represented only by the U. A. W. A.

The Packard agreement leaves the Ford Motor Co. the only automobile manufacturer which does not have a written pact of some kind with the U. A. W. A.

The agreement establishes minimum wage rates of 65 cents for women and 75 cents for men employed more than six months, effective May 30. An additional 5 cents an hour was promised all night workers.

Time and a half pay was agreed upon for all time over eight hours a day and 40 hours a week. Observance of seniority in layoffs and rehiring was promised.

"In case of a general layoff, hours of work will be reduced to 32 hours per week in the department before anyone is laid off," one clause said.

Both the company and the union promised not to use intimidation or coercion in their activities. Rights to discharge, transfer or lay off workers was vested "exclusively in the company provided that this will not be used for the purpose of injury or discrimination against any employe."

Safer Fuel Feeder Tested by Airline

Chicago, May 9 (AP).—Progress in the aviation industry's drive for maximum flight safety was reported today by W. A. Patterson, aviation executive, with the development of a new type of fuel feed system.

The device, now undergoing tests by the United Air Lines, virtually eliminates the conventional aircraft engine carburetor, Patterson said, and also offers a solution for the problems raised by carburetor ice and excessive intake heat.

He said the new system was considered so important that details were withheld at the request of the military aviation authorities. The device, developed by the Bendix Corporation, promises increased dependability and lower rate of fuel consumption.

Senate Planning War Tax Measure To Halt Profits

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Finance Committee shortly will attempt to fashion a drastic corporate and individual war-time tax bill out of a series of anti-war-profit proposals.

Neutrality legislation intended to guarantee United States isolation by prohibiting munitions shipments to belligerents and restricting trade in war materials now is on the statute books. Some Senators expressed belief Congress would follow that up by enacting principles of the Connally bill to finance a war from current taxes rather than borrowing.

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, said yesterday the Finance Committee had decided to substitute his proposals for a bill approved by the Senate Military Affairs Committee giving the President authority to draft both industry and men in wartime.

Nippon Moves To Stop Rising Tide of Strikes

Labor Leaders Arrested in Tokyo; Nation-wide Walkout Threatens.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 9.—Japan's rising tide of labor unrest today moved the government to take action to check an epidemic of strikes.

After minor clashes, the climax of a long series of disputes affecting Tokyo's transport system, the police arrested many leaders of the workers of the motor bus service operated by the municipality.

The government has been seriously harassed by labor difficulties since assuming office three months ago. The home office announced there had been 704 labor disputes, involving 63,000 workers, during that period.

Leaders of employes of the communications ministry, which operates the empire's postal, telegraph and telephone services, called a meeting for May 12 to formulate demands for 30 per cent wage increases.

They are threatening a strike if their demands are rejected, and such a walkout would paralyze practically all communications, travel and transportation in the nation.

Rapidly rising living costs coupled with unusual prosperity in certain branches of industry—notably those making munitions—are factors in the labor unrest.

Employes of the Dai Nihon (Great Japan) Beer Co., protesting that their product brings happiness and health to everybody but themselves, today joined the increasing company of sit-down, go-slow and just plain strikers.

More than half the disputes involve wage increase demands. Metal workers are in the forefront of the battle for higher pay, this being a reflection of the booming prosperity of munitions industries. Textile and chemical workers follow closely.

Seeing Both Sides.

Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady has labored long and earnestly in the cause of industrial peace. His skillful services as mediator and conciliator have been available in conflicts large and small, ranging recently from the maritime strike on the West Coast to local strikes of hotel employes. He has had unexampled opportunities to discover the conditions essential to success in collective bargaining.

Consequently the advice which he gave the garment workers' union in its convention at Atlantic City, possesses more than ordinary significance. It not only represents wisdom gained by dealing with many obstinate problems, but it expresses the philosophy of a former trade-union official whose interest in labor's cause is not questioned.

Mr. McGrady's formula for industrial peace, reduced to its simplest terms, calls for sincere effort to understand their mutual problems by both employers and employes. With this is coupled loyal acceptance of the duties and responsibilities inseparable from effective co-operation.

In the case of labor, stress is laid upon the importance of discipline among union members, and observance of the sanctity of contract. Efficiency in production and co-operation in the elimination of waste are also placed among the objectives of a responsible labor leadership. Employers are asked to recognize the shortcomings of the paternalistic attitude as applicable to large-scale modern industry.

Mr. McGrady believes that the irresponsible practices which lead employers to treat labor representatives as "agitators" are due to ignorance. Both sides benefit by sitting around a conference table and looking at their problems as man to man. All that the Wagner act attempts to do, in Mr. McGrady's opinion, is to assure workers organization and bargaining rights equivalent to those already enjoyed by employers.

Such rights entail acceptance of duties and responsibilities on the part of labor as well as management, even though the act itself makes no specific mention of them. Otherwise collective bargaining would afford no guarantee of industrial peace.

Co-ordinating The Police.

There's nothing new in the proposal that Washington's six or seven police agencies be co-ordinated. The idea is put forward regularly whenever the subject of appropriations comes up. Yet age does not wither nor custom stale the merit of the proposal.

Few economies would result from a merger. The District's law enforcement personnel is too small as it is. But co-ordination could improve the picture on Capitol Hill. There the policing is managed by a special corps under the command of the sergeant at arms. There is no criticism of his work, but the fact that his men are political appointees is out of key with the modern need for police efficiency. Moreover, their sense of political obligation tends to undermine morale in other police departments of the city.

A more important argument for co-ordination lies in the extent to which there is jurisdictional overlapping. This fosters confusion and buck-passing. In winter months, for example, the park police have little to do but patrol a few traffic arteries. Under a co-ordinated plan, any unneeded men might be transferred for duty in the business district. Conversely, in the spring, when thousands of visitors throng the parks, extra Metropolitan officers might profitably be available for park assignments.

Already there is much of this co-operation. But it is still noted that a parade on Constitution avenue requires a permit from the Metropolitan Department to march as far as Fifteenth street, and from there on permission of the Parks Office is needed. Co-ordination would eliminate this and many similar unnecessary motions. Park officials protest that their men need special training, such as a knowledge of horticultural values. They add, too, that other cities have tried to combine park and city forces without success.

But the functions of the park police can scarcely be more specialized than those of the harbor police, who operate efficiently from within the Metropolitan Department.

A Failure Of Leadership.

Talk of adjourning Congress as soon as hot weather begins suggests that a growing body of legislators are dissatisfied with the manner in which the present session has been conducted. There is no possibility that all the major bills awaiting action can be disposed of within the next two months. Restless legislators are fully aware of that fact. Their inclination to go home after enacting only a small part of the President's program appears to be a diplomatic protest against his attitude toward the law-making branch.

Congress has been extensively criticized for its sluggish movement and lack of constructive accomplishments to date. In four months it has passed only four appropriation bills. A few other bills and resolutions have been approved, of which the so-called neutrality act and the new Guffey coal law appear to be the more important. For the most part its machinery has been in slow motion, while its members have talked about packing the Supreme Court and possible White House plans for regulation of industry, business and agriculture.

Too much censure for this inactivity has been laid at the door of Congress. It is true, that Congress is floundering where it ought to be moving resolutely toward the establishment of national policies. Its leadership is weak and vacillating. And many of its members appear eager to avoid a showdown upon momentous issues of the day. But what is the reason for this weakness and inefficiency?

The immediate cause of the accumulating legislative jam is the bill to reorganize the courts. For that measure the President must take full responsibility. As pointed out by Prof. Arthur L. Corbin, of the Yale Law School, "Congress itself would never have proposed" the appointment of justices "to do as they are told." The issue raised by this measure is so momentous that it overshadows every other policy which Congress may discuss. Legislators can scarcely be expected to go calmly forward with their routine work when the foundations of democratic government are being attacked.

In still another way the President appears to be chiefly responsible for the confused situation developing in Congress. During the last four years Congress has acquired the habit of acting on White House bills. Legislation has been initiated by the President and approved by the Senate and House. The leaders in Congress have become mere spokesmen for the Chief Executive. Consequently, when the Chief Executive withholds part of his program with the object of forcing through the distasteful court packing measure, Congress is naturally befuddled.

There is no more serious aspect of this legislative tangle than the breakdown of leadership on Capitol Hill. Congress appears to have lost its initiative. An unusually large number of inexperienced members accentuate the need for expert and courageous guidance. But that function has been resigned into the hands of the President. When he tells Congress to pack the Supreme Court before formulating any new policies of a major character that body is stymied.

This situation may well provoke a revolt. It should have come several years ago before the habit of relying upon the Executive to propose all major legislation became so well established. Now it is difficult for Congress to regain its position as the policy-making agency of government. Its protest against Executive domination tends to become passive. Many members who are annoyed by the President's tactics would rather go home than face a contest with him.

Fortunately, the Supreme Court fight is giving rise to a new independent leadership in the Senate. It remains to be seen how far that movement will extend. If this group is strong enough to defeat the judiciary bill, it may become a significant factor in the formulation of new policies. In the meantime the country ought to weigh carefully the current results of surrendering control over legislative policies to the President.

Supported By Public Opinion.

Since Congress always attempts to keep an ear to the ground, the present drive for economy is not difficult to understand. Only 3 per cent of the citizens queried in a Nation-wide poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion favor a new tax bill over reduced expenditures as a means of balancing the budget. Out of every 100 participating 72 definitely place the need for economies first.

It is true, of course, that most every one indorses economy in principle. The actual cutting of expenditures is a different matter. The public is not in a position to know precisely where economies can be effected without seriously curtailing governmental functions. It is the task of Congress to decide which expenditures can be cut. Nevertheless, this emphatic indorsement of current efforts to eliminate unnecessary spending should stiffen the determination of legislators to perform that job courageously and thoroughly.

When Congress is compelled to search for more revenue it will find significance in the public approval of higher income taxes in the lower brackets. The greatest number of participants in the poll believe that a married man earning $3,000 should pay a tax of $30. At present the average citizen earning that sum pays nothing at all. Apparently Congress, in this instance, has grossly misinterpreted public opinion.

The demand for economy, however, is so strong that it cannot be misunderstood. Every family knows what the consequences will be if it persistently spends more than its income. Since the excuse for excessive Federal outlays has now disappeared, politicians may expect a continuing swell in the volume of this outcry against extravagance, until the budget is balanced and the national debt substantially reduced.

Child's Play.

The little girl who, finding the party not to her liking, picks up her dolls and goes home now has her counterpart in the field of international relations.

In retaliation for the criticism of Italy's policies in Ethiopia and Spain voiced recently in the British press, the Rome government has not only barred all but three British newspapers from entry into Italy, but has also recalled all Italian correspondents from London.

The first action is not uncommon. In the world of journalism there is a long honor roll of newspapers which, in printing the truth, have made themselves objectionable to dictators and have therefore been barred from regimented nations. But it is something new in international affairs for a government to legislate itself into enforced ignorance of events taking place in another land because it disapproves what is taking place in that land.

It is also more than a little ludicrous. Who will be hurt by Italy's action in recalling its correspondents? Certainly not Great Britain. London is overcrowded anyway, and it makes not a particle of difference if the Italian papers print anything or nothing about the coronation. In totalitarian states news at best is a mixture of partial truth and falsehoods. A little less of that poisonous pap will not hurt the Italian people either.

In fact, no one will be hurt by Mussolini's latest grandstand play but the Fascist regime itself. But the egregious display by the Rome government is also a tribute to the power of the uncontrolled press in lands still free of the blight of totalitarianism. The British newspapers, with the exception of the three singled out for a bear hug by the Duce, will wear their expulsion from Italy as a proud distinction.

Respites.

Well, the Derby is over, but it is only one of many pleasantries helping to crowd war and depression off the front pages. Yesterday's news offered special relief from bitter politics, depressing strife and disaster.

Louisville was flooded, not with dark water from the Ohio, but with throngs of colorful race-goers. The millions who couldn't be with them on the Downs could at least experience some part of their gay pleasure through the newspaper accounts. And so, thankfully, it will be with the Davis Cup matches and the yacht races off Newport and the other big events on the summer's calendar. There will be some respite from the somber worries of the world.

Spring has also brought welcome distractions outside the field of sports. The cherry blossoms here are past but the fragrance of the Winchester apple blossom festival still lingers. Next on the local schedule seems to be the circus, due next week. For an afternoon at least, gymnasts and Joeys will take tired minds off the day's problems.

And this week, of course, the coronation takes place. The newsreels and rotogravures may have overdone their coverage of the preparations, but it is a safe bet that many of those now most loudly protesting their boredom will be found Wednesday morning at 5 o'clock huddled in bathrobes before their radios, drinking in every word of the ceremony's description.

Our times are not wholly sour.

"A current sun-spot is so large the world could easily be thrown in it," declares an astronomer. Tell us more.

"How long should a man wait for a girl who is late for an appointment?" some one asks. Show us the girl.

Some gravediggers are on strike. Now if the obstetricians will call a sit-down, the cycle will be complete.

Calamitous Year of 1771.

From a letter by Richard Bland dated August 1, 1771, reprinted in the William and Mary Quarterly.

Upon the 27th of May a most dreadful Inundation happened in James, Rappahannock and Roanoke Rivers occasioned by very heavy and incessant Rains upon the mountains for ten or twelve days, during which time we in the lower part of the country had a serene sky without the appearance of a cloud. The Rivers rose to the amazing Height of forty Feet perpendicular above the common Level of the Water. Impetuous Torrents rushed from the mountains with such astonishing Rapidity that nothing could withstand their mighty Force. Promiscuous Heaps of Houses, Trees, Men, Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Hogs, Merchandise, Corn, Tobacco & every other Thing that was unfortunately within the dreadful sweep were seen Floating upon the Waters, without a possibility of their being saved. The Finest Low Grounds were ruined, and many of the Best Lands totally destroyed: those which escaped, the best being like the Deserts of Arabia covered with large Bodies of White Sands, in many places six Feet deep. 3,000 hogsheads of Tobacco were lost from the Public Warehouses; and about the same number from the different Plantations upon the Rivers. The total damage to the Country is computed at two millions Sterling & I do not think it is exaggerated.

A Bump For Burlesque.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have heard it said of Westbrook Pegler that before beginning his day's work he breakfasts from a keg of nails.

If there is any truth in the report I would like to contribute toward purchase of the next keg, for he holds to the self-evident truth that pretended love of art is no excuse for exploitation of filth.

I refer to his articles concerning unchaste exhibitions in modern burlesque shows. They are worth reading by all who are at all worried about the present social drift.

I am old enough to recall the days of Booth, Barrett, Forrest and Jefferson. I also recall that there were even then so-called "low theaters," and they were low enough in all conscience, but the girls of that period who displayed their charms would have blushed to their toe-tips at the spectacle of the modern maid of the revue.

What may be the next step? We can only guess, but it is not unlikely that we will be treated to the spectacle of undraped American womanhood parading in front of our architecturally magnificent playhouses. Its prime advertising value no one can doubt.

But while I hail Pegler's efforts as of genuine service, may I not venture to suggest that if The Post would turn the full force of its editorial batteries against this citadel of vice it would count for a lot more? Do you not recall that once upon a time a prominent New York paper effectually bruised the heel of the most satanic organization then in existence? It was a service the American people have never forgotten.

The Post has a similar opportunity. If it enters conscientiously upon the task and carries it to success, as it can, it will win a warm and lasting place in the hearts of 90 per cent of our citizenship. Is it not a worthwhile suggestion?

Spain's Enemies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by your editorial, "Trouble Within Trouble," that you have serious misgivings about what the Spanish government will come to once they have suppressed the Fascists. You will have little enough to worry about. For one thing, a great majority of the anarchists are behind the Catalonian Peoples Front government. However, there is a comparatively small group who call themselves Incontrolados (incontrollables) who have been in disagreement with the government throughout the war as they want no government, which is admittedly an insane policy. Yet, there are enough of them together with the Trotzkyites (also small in number) and Fascist provocateurs to create what has just happened in Catalonia.

Concerning the Trotzkyites not too much need be said. The role they played through their organization, the Poum, is all too plain as it had to be dissolved early last winter and has since drifted into the C. N. T., one of the anarchist trade unions. They capitalize on the ultra-radical theories of the anarchists and raise the slogan, "Integral Revolution," which sounds very revolutionary but is in reality extremely reactionary, really meaning "forget the struggle against fascism and fight against the Peoples Front."

On the other hand, Fascist spies have been in Catalonia even before the outbreak of the rebellion last summer, and it was only natural that they went to work chiefly within the anarchist unions. It would be absurd, indeed, to think that all of them were exposed after the Catalonian people had crushed the rebellious Fascist militia. What more favorable moment could they have picked when most of the troops were on the Aragon front?

After all, there is only one thing to keep in mind, that, once fascism is defeated in Spain, so also will their Trotzkyite and uncontrolled elements be defeated, for the Spanish people can and will crush their enemies from within and without.

To Avoid Gas Tax Rise.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is generally recognized that employing the streets of Washington for garages should be stopped. The question is how to accomplish it.

I suggest that a rental of $5 per month should be charged for this privilege until some way is found to stop the practice entirely. This probably will have a tendency to take some of the cars off the streets and fill up some of the vacant garages. It will also probably encourage the building of more garages for rental purposes, which is now not worthwhile.

It also seems only fair to those of us who go to the expense of providing garages that the others should do the same so we can have some chance to park our cars for an hour or two when we desire to stop downtown a while.

If this plan could be put into effect, perhaps the increase in gasoline tax could be prevented.

The Memorial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A year ago, when I came to Washington, your paper carried, almost daily, letters objecting to the work of improving the parks—particularly Lafayette and Franklin. I believe that any observer will agree that these two parks, after the face-lifting, present a better appearance than they have for many, many years.

Today, the objectors are talking about the plan to change the Tidal Basin and it appears that the thing they are worrying about is the damage it may do the cherry trees. I know nothing about landscaping, but I am perfectly willing to accept the judgment of men who are trained in this line of work. I have no doubt that the Tidal Basin will present a much better appearance after the proposed work is completed, and I think that when it is all done the cherry trees will make a much better appearance than at present. We must admit that there is much room for improvement.

There were undoubtedly many objections to the proposal to build the Lincoln Memorial, but who, today, would want to have that work undone? True, it cost a lot of money, but anything worth while costs money and since our cost of doing things is increasing steadily all along the line, why object to a few million dollars spent in an effort to do honor to Mr. Jefferson and at the same time add to the beauty of the Nation's Capital.

Personally, I would like to see this memorial take the form of a school similar to Annapolis and West Point where young men could be trained for government service, but since that idea does not take on very readily then let us do the next best thing and build the memorial already planned and put it in the proper location to balance those memorials already built. As stated, there is room for improvement in the territory under discussion and I am sure most of us will be pleased when it has been completed.

Excess Savings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposal of Secretary Wallace to appropriate all "excess savings" and turn them over to the unemployed constitutes no solution to the problems which confront us. Such a course would not raise the standard of the lower strata of society. It would merely reduce our entire population to a lower level.

For example, millions of people are now earning a living from the automobile industry. Common sense ought to teach that they can continue to do so only if there are enough people of sufficient income to purchase all the automobiles these workers turn out.

To appropriate all "excess earnings" and devote them to boondoggling pursuits would soon fritter away the backlog of reserve savings which alone give the average man courage to undertake those enterprises which give employment to others. Destroy the confidence engendered by that reserve, and soon there will be more people in the relief rolls than there will be taxpayers to support them.

Thoughts On The Hindenburg Crash.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our Government offered its sympathy to the German government for the loss of the "Hindenburg." I agree with this act of international courtesy.

However, the President and Secretary Hull should have also found a word of sympathy to the Spanish government, in its national disaster, when fliers and bombers of the nation, to which they now express their sympathy, killed more than 800 women and children in Guernica.

Has our Government sympathy only in Fascist disasters?

D. W. SCOTT.

Alexandria, Va., May 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was listening to the radio last evening when the crash of the "Hindenburg" was first announced. I do not know of any disaster that affects me more than one of a dirigible.

After reading the list of dirigible accidents given by the Associated Press this morning, I was a little proud to think that I could go a little farther back. My father, an Army man, was one of the first few men who volunteered in that newly formed service, "Aeronautique."

1906. "Le Patrie." The first dirigible built by Lebaudy for the French government. How pretty she looked with her bright yellow envelope and her open gondola. I remember how, in class, I used to draw pictures of her on my text books. But in December, 1907, at Verdun, she was in the field, with my father and another man in the gondola starting the engines when a gust of wind tore her away from the hands of the ground crew, and she was swept away. In the excitement the blue trousers of my father were caught in the engines, but he was able to tear them loose and jump out safely. After that leather overalls were ordered worn in the air service.

Then there was the "Lebaudy," "Le Republique" that crashed with the first fatalities. A blade of the metal propeller broke and flew into the envelope. The four fliers were killed. Another accident, another experience. The metal propellers were changed to wooden ones.

"Le Colonel Renard" followed and in 1909 she was the real queen of La Semaine d'Aviation in Reims. Then came the "Adjudant Vincenot," the "Adjudant Reau," and others, named in memory of the heroes of "Le Republique" disaster.

1914. The war, and almost the end of our dirigibles in France. But also a new hope, a new wonderful future for aviation.

A FRENCH WASHINGTONIAN.

Washington, May 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our President has sent a message of condolence to Germany, expressing his "deepest sympathies" for the disaster of the dirigible, "Hindenburg." He addressed this message not to the German people, but to the commander in chief of the world's fascism and oppression. He addressed the message to Herr Adolf Hitler.

But I do not recall our President ever sending a message to the peaceful Ethiopian people for the grief, murder and destruction committed by Fascists. Our President does not seem to hear the shrieking, wailing, moaning of the women and children in the democratic Spain, being driven from their homes by Fascist bombs. We protest against this pro-Fascist's attitude of our President.

THE VOICE.

Today's Clocks

A ROANOKE housewife's family clock, according to the Leader, recently went on a rampage, and by her count struck 1,100 times in 45 minutes. Remarkable, but not more remarkable than the performance of any alarm clock. Does any one know of an alarm clock that ever stopped ringing until somebody got out of bed and stifled it?

Be all that as it may, the clock is a friendly old pussy cat. We love it. The big clock with the slow-moving pendulum grins at you and speaks eloquently of the dignity of leisurely movement. He says sit right where you are and smoke another cigar—the old job can wait. Look me straight in the face, and reminisce and philosophize. Don't be in a hurry. Rome, indeed, not even Miami, was made in a day. Take it easy, bo! I'll see you through. I'll play you a sweet little tune every 30 minutes, I'll yawn decorously every 5 minutes, but don't pay any attention to that. I'm not bored. That smothered, scratchy yawn I have to give every five minutes is something the manufacturer thought of. It wasn't my idea at all. I've made a career of killing time and I like to see others kill time. I told you to smoke a cigar, but I really should have told you to smoke a pipe. That's the time-killer's best smoke, although cigars will do. Of course, if I were one of these little jumpy tick-tack clocks I'd ask you to smoke a package or two of cigarettes while sitting there looking at me wondering what I'm going to say next. * * * What's the hurry? Only 24 hours in a day, and I make it a rule to count them slowly and announce them in mellow, moving tones. How do you like my act? * * * Oh, you can't make a living if you don't go to work? Then who's going to wind me up so I can live the life of an artist? Why, you loafer, get out of here! Dong, dong, dong, dong, dong! (Is that a firebell in the night?) No, just a big, lazy clock gone haywire—maybe it's like the one the lady in Roanoke has. It is behind with its alarm-making, and so it strikes more than is necessary. The one in Roanoke struck 1,100 times in 45 minutes, which shows that even clocks are as treacherous and unfaithful as pet cats. But they are lovely and reassuring, nevertheless.

Then, there is the little clock—the littler timepieces are, strangely enough, the faster they click, strike, sneeze and shimmy. They are against leisure. Unable themselves to rest, they are unwilling for anybody else in the family to rest. They think everybody should be like busy bees and go-getting ants. They believe in efficiency experts and hard-boiled Simon Legrees. They are against killing time. They are for saving all the time that God ever made, as if that could possibly be done, even if none of earth's 2,000,000,000 of people lost no time in performing any duty, much less any pleasure.

The little timepieces are the Nervous Nellies of the sun's vast domain. All of them are prissy little brats, spoiled beyond their worth, ill-tempered, ill-behaved. They split up seconds, butcher minutes and ignore hours. They never heard of days. They spend themselves furiously and recklessly during their short lives. They die in the end like a bantam rooster that has been pecked by a turkey gobbler, leaving nothing behind except a tradition of beauty. The midget timepieces are lovely to look upon, but hard to live with. They are too nervous.

In this modern age it is not easy to make a living under the direction of a big, leisurely clock with a mellow tone. If you listen to such a loafer, you are liable to wind up on the relief rolls. We own to that. But if you listen to the Nervous Nellies of clockdom, you'll work yourself to death before your time. Most of us want to be lazy, but prissy little timepieces, now so popular and beautiful, won't let us. And if we pay any heed to the big clocks, we'll go hungry and ragged.

Heigh-ho! Give us a clock that takes its time!

From the Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Italy's Duce, while one may not approve of all his doings, surely must get credit for keeping busy. With crises popping all around like firecrackers on a Chinese holiday, he still find time to argue with an English esthete over what amounts to art in staging a spectacle for the glory of Rome in the Colosseum.

Mussolini wants to present "Quo Vadis" in pageant form with the grand climax supplied by Primo Carnera wrestling with a lion, and certainly the sight of Old Leo and Old Satchel Foots locked in combat would be something. On the other hand, though, Mr. Gordon Craig, the English artist in question, wants to put on Bach's "Passion of Palestrina." Between these two points of view there is a vast gulf fixed, but with the decision in the hands of a Fascist committee, we have an idea it will be Satchel Foots and the lion.

In passing, Il Duce is guilty of an inaccuracy, anyhow. In the big scene of "Quo Vadis" mighty Ursus rushed forward to rescue his beautiful young princess from the horns of a great wild bull. And, as long as Congress and House of Commons stay in session and go as they are, we greatly fear no audience these days will get any thrill out of seeing any one man throwing the bull. Like so many other industries, it has passed into the quantity production stage.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

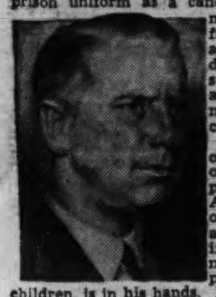
24 Times 60 Times 60.

I HAVE BEEN THINKING of the personal equation between a member of a parole board in any of our States and the man who comes before the board in prison uniform as a candidate for clemency. The member of the board is a free man himself, and I am assuming that he is a fairly decent human being, with sufficient imagination to realize what his decisions mean to hundreds of applicants.



The member has the power of God almost, for thousands of years of the lives of the prisoners are at his disposal. At a nod of his head a prisoner may walk out of prison and go back to his family, if he has one, and the happiness of several innocent persons, including the man's children, is in his hands. If he turns down the application the man goes back to his cell and the smells and routine prison life to watch his step for another year or two, when he may try again.

His family, if any, do not appear in person at the hearing, but the member of the parole board, if he is a human being, must feel that presence nevertheless and visualize several soiled little kids off in some city or country slum who have two strikes on them at the start of life because their father has been away, as the euphemism has it.

WHEN THE HEARINGS are over and the member gathers up his papers to leave, nobody questions his right to walk out through the iron gate. He is a power, and the guards, who usually are political appointees, defer to him with a fawning courtesy never shown the prisoners. He may walk over to the warden's house to eat fried chicken cooked by a prisoner and served by another prisoner, and he may carry off a souvenir, a few trinkets carved out of wood or peach stones or woven from horse hair by prisoners in their spare time.

I understand that in some States the prisoners are not allowed to make a sales talk before the board but only appear and answer questions, and that may be a good rule, because a con-man, for example, is an expert in this line. He might put some extra body English on his appeal and melt a stone with eloquence. Yet there the man stands, having served, let us say, five years already, and the man on the board knows that the years are long and monotonous and that prisoners count time by the day, the hour, the minute and even by the second.

At night or bending over their work in the day, they do problems in mental arithmetic.

Twenty-four times 365 is 8,760 hours, times 60 is 525,600 minutes, times 60 is 31,563,000 seconds to a year, minus so many days for good behavior—until the man's mind learns to reckon all things in terms of 24 times 60 times 60. The parole board can give him a break or turn him back for 365 times 60 times 60, and a humane man must feel a great pull in his heart and a temptation to take a chance contrary to his suspicions. Prisoners grovel to him in an unmanly way to catch his favor, and it is one thing to consider convicts as a vague class of bad men behind prison walls, which most people never have seen from the outside, but quite another to meet them, one by one, as human beings asking to be set free.

OF COURSE, not all members of the parole board are decent men. Some of them are politicians of the lowest type, ignorant, sordid and brutal, who get half drunk before the hearings and snooze through the appeal, because the business has been done beforehand through outside negotiations and the decisions are in the bag.

The prisoner's family has done business with a political leader, and a thousand dollars or five or ten, or maybe as little as a couple of hundred dollars, if the family is just a no-account poor family, has been put into distribution. There is no point in wondering what goes on in the mind of that kind of parole board member, but the conscientious members, of whom I hear there are a few scattered about the country, must have many a struggle in the line of their duty.

There is a prisoner in Florida named Henry Sitamore, a jewel thief, doing forty years for robbery, who broke jail briefly five years ago and has been kept in solitary in the death house ever since.

At a distance you may say that he belongs in prison and that precautions should be taken lest he break jail again. But in Florida other men have served less than five years for murder.

I wonder how many who say that prison serves them right could interview a man five years in the death house and vote to keep him there 40 times 365 times 24 times 60 times 60.

Coronation Facts.

It will be the greatest coronation the Duke of Windsor ever missed.

• • • •

Two million outsiders will flock to London for the spectacle, all but 127 of whom will have to buy the next day's papers to find out what happened.

• • • •

Of the 2,000,000 visitors 1,987,325 will ask, "Which is Mrs. Simpson?" "Are those jewels real?" and "How do you suppose England ever managed to keep that coach away from Henry Ford?"

• • • •

Seats along the line of march will cost from $25 to $400, depending on how much a person wants to give up to beat the newsreels to it.

• • • •

The parade will cover six miles, so the King and Queen can get a chance to see British life close up and see what London is like during a riot.

• • • •

More policemen and soldiers will be used to preserve order than were ever used before anywhere except at an American gangster's funeral.

• • • •

The flags and banners if stitched end to end would reach from Piccadilly Circus to Lemon City, Fla., and still leave enough to cover the entire arctic regions between Stanley Baldwin and Mrs. Simpson.

• • • •

One hundred and twenty needlewomen will have worked 18 hours a day for more than a year to make the coronation robes in which the King and Queen will suffer.

• • • •

The seating capacity of Westminster Abbey will be increased from 2,000 to 8,000, meaning that 6,000 more people will be buried in the abbey without marble markers.

• • • •

King George and Queen Elizabeth will ride for hours in the prehistoric coronation coach to demonstrate what a King and Queen have to do for England. (This is said to be the real reason Edward resigned.)

• • • •

All the souvenirs offered for sale would fill the liner Queen Mary six times, and leave enough junk to take care of the New Orleans Mardi Gras, eleven Hollywood weddings, the inaugural of 26 American Presidents and the Rose Bowl football game.

New Arms And Prices

By Robert M. Bratter.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE RAPIDITY of price changes since last fall has attracted a great deal of attention here and abroad. The changes have been of such size and nature as to invite official notice on the part of the President and various Cabinet members.

Last November the average of wholesale prices in the United States was 82 per cent of the 1926 level. By early April they had advanced to over 88 per cent of their 1926 level. Then came the President's renewed warnings about speculation and the assertion that some commodity prices were too high. There followed a sharp decline in the markets. From a peak of 88.3 in April the weekly United States index of commodity prices has already declined to 87.5. This figure, however, is still 3.3 per cent above the first week of 1937, and 9.9 per cent higher than a year ago.

A boom usually sows the seeds of its ultimate collapse, whether it be in the case of a single commodity like pepper, in that of a few related commodities like the nonferrous metals, or in all commodities, as when currency fears dominate the markets. The bursting of the bubble may be spontaneous, or it may result from outside action in advance of maturity. In the case of the recent interruption the upward course of wholesale prices, it is evident that the decline was precipitated by Washington.

Expressions Of Official Opinions Said Influential.

THE RECENT DECLINE was not so much the result of concrete official action as it was the effect of the expression of high official opinion. Through its monetary control particularly, and other powers, the Government is able to influence prices more or less directly. The mere suspicion that the Government may later act to check the inflationary trend may be sufficient to influence speculative transactions. In April this proved to be the case. At the same time it should be noted that currency management and price control by headlines can eventually lose its effectiveness, if threats are merely repeated and are not followed up by action.

That the Administration and the public have lately evidenced so much interest in commodity prices has been due to the sudden spurt of life shown by the wholesale averages. After the large step-up in prices following our adoption of an inflationary monetary course early in 1933, the wholesale price level advanced at a slower pace and in 1935 and the first nine months of 1936 the average of all commodities was relatively stable. In contrast, the increase during the five months following last October was precipitous, particularly in raw materials and semimanufactures such as metals and metal products, building materials, chemicals and drugs and housefurnishings.

The change noted above is not to be attributed to any single cause. Factors which have influenced the rise since the depression include, of course, inflationary measures of the Government, especially the expenditure of deficit money. They give prominent place to anticipated and actual economic recovery, diminution of formerly excessive commodity stocks, production-restriction arrangements as in the cases of copper and rubber, increasing material and labor costs in manufacturing industry, and the like. Speculation has certainly tended to accelerate the price movements, as it always does.

Rearmament Programs Commonly Called Factors.

AMONG THE FACTORS in the recent price rise most frequently cited is the armaments race in Europe and elsewhere. The re-equipping and expansion of military, naval and air forces, not to mention the consumption of raw materials in connection with the actual conflicts in Ethiopia and Spain, has been a powerful factor in driving prices up, it is asserted. Yet it is easy to overstress the munitions factor.

That armament demand has been a definite contributory cause of the rise in prices of such commodities as copper, steel, wool and various chemicals goes without saying. But their contribution to the price rise is believed to be considerably exaggerated.

Scrap steel is a case in point. This commodity at present constitutes an important "raw material" in the manufacture of steel. Its use effects a saving in the cost of manufacturing steel. At the bottom of the depression our scrap steel exports were only 136,000 gross tons. In 1935 they were 2,104,000 tons. The price of steelwork scrap advanced from $7.76 per ton in 1932 to $21.60 in early April, 1937. The increase, it might be assumed, is to be explained chiefly by armament activity abroad. That the foreign demand for scrap iron, moreover, is detrimental to our steel industry would seem to be the basis for the Schwellenbach bill to control scrap steel exports.

This assumption, however, is not easy to sustain. Our exports of 2,000,000 tons of scrap steel in 1935 were small compared with the 26,000,000 tons consumed within this country. In 1936 our exports did not expand, but our home consumption increased materially. If demand is a clew to price changes, home consumption is at least 13 times as important as total foreign demand, of which only a part is for armaments purposes.

Incidentally, failure to export scrap steel may actually involve economic waste, since metal in this form is expensive to ship overland to our interior-located mills. Scrap steel is the debris of the industrial age. It often accumulates far from the steel mills which could use it and often exportation is the logical disposal of this cumbersome commodity.

Only Small Portion Of Scrap Used For Arms.

ONLY A SMALL PART of the scrap steel we export goes into armaments. In Japan, industrial uses; in the United Kingdom, construction demands have been much more important than military consumption. As in the case of scrap steel, so in the cases of other commodities, the armaments boom abroad has been only one of many factors accounting for recent world-wide price increases. It is true, no doubt, that the trading public overestimated the importance of the armaments factor and speculated accordingly. This speculation, pyramided on armament activity, has played a much more important part than the armament activity itself. If speculators act on their hope to sell to governments five or ten times as much of a commodity as those governments will actually buy, the less nimble speculators are naturally due for ultimate disappointment.

Here and abroad the opinion is spreading that a general European war is less likely than it seemed last year, thanks largely to British rearmament. Efforts to secure an international disarmament agreement have been rumored. Thus, a decline in rearmament demand for commodities is now in the realm of possibility, and with such decline a quieting of speculative activity predicated upon such demand may follow. Other factors, like large crops in the offing, are also present to dampen speculative enthusiasm on the short run.

As for the longer run, any prediction as to prices is hazardous for the reason that the price structure is sensitive both to natural conditions and to official policy, which is on a "24-hour basis." A lowering of the price of gold, for example, while not likely this year, is an ultimate possibility. Such a step would cause a decline in speculative markets. In fact, a rapid and material rise in commodity prices might make a lowering of the price of gold more likely than it now appears. The long-term trend of economic activity here is still upward, and this, depending on the rapidity with which it develops, may well cause wholesale prices to resume their advance some months from now.

Mississippi Flood Appears Averted

Charleston, Mo., May 9 (AP).—Workers struggling to erect an emergency dike to prevent the rising Mississippi River from inundating 80,000 acres of fertile farmland in the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway awaited the answer tonight—an expected crest of 48.7 feet at Cairo, Ill., where the Ohio River joins the Mississippi.

The army of 5,000 workers was believed to have won the battle.

"We think we've got the river whipped," said George Shelby, member of the Mississippi County flood control committee.

German Talent at Peak Says Propaganda Chief

Free City of Danzig, May 9 (AP).—Germany has more talented persons than she has ever had, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of propaganda, said today. Addressing a Nazi kultur meeting here, he said: "Never before has Germany possessed so many talented persons, never has there been so much poetry written, music composed, pictures painted and edifices built."

He pointed to the ejection of Jews from the German are world, and promised a bright future for German genius since, he said, the Nazi state has discarded the notion that an artist's life naturally involves starvation.

London Letter

By David Wills

Orchids To Neville.

London.

THE MOON has turned to green cheese and pigs are flying in England; for which, orchids to Neville. Our Government is in a lap dissolve, with Neville Chamberlain fading in as Stanley Baldwin fades out. And Neville's government is doing things which would make the toes of his ancestors curl in the grave; things which cause consternation among the opposition because he is stealing its thunder. Neville is calmly introducing measures which, if sponsored by a Labor government, would make all good conservatives scream blue murder.

A little time back Mr. Baldwin attended a thousand-cover linner given by the Federation of British Industry. A thousand of the lords of industry gathered to hear, so they hoped, praises for their enterprise, congratulations on their economic recovery behind the tariff barriers introduced by the first national government. The smoke from a thousand black cigars shuddered as Prime Minister Baldwin delivered one of his best homilies on the necessity of reducing hours of work, attending to the rights of labor, keeping an eye on export markets even at the expense of the protected home market.

If it had stopped there, there might have been merely the usual murmur of applause from the public for yet another of nice Mr. Baldwin's nice speeches in defense of the nicest kind of conservatism. But actions have followed speeches in a quite unexpected manner. The budget for one thing and the coal royalties for another.

• • • •

CONSERVATIVES in America, who find so much to abhor in the actions of the present Washington Administration, and look with such longing eyes on the sound solid rule of conservatism in England, will doubtless have noted that in his recent budget Mr. Chamberlain included retroactive penalties against those who had adopted various means of evading their income tax obligations. Everybody approved his proposal, and it passed by almost without comment. The purpose of the government was to tax in certain ways; if individuals used their ingenuity to thwart the government's intention, they could hardly complain if the government applied its own ingenuity to close up any gaps, and to rap the knuckles of those who hoped to get away with it.

The main item in the budget, the tax on growth of company profits, left consternation among the government benches, which were urged to take heart by the Labor opposition. That those who are making profits should pay higher taxes seems to the general public an eminently reasonable proposition. Mr. Chamberlain, by adopting it as his own, risked opposition from his die-hard supporters, but added considerably to his own political power. The combination of a profits tax and a three-penny income tax was doubtless skillfully chosen for just that purpose. Some of his expert financial advisers urged that the profits tax should be strengthened by a full shilling on income tax, but although this might be economically wise, it would be politically heroic. Not even Chamberlain might have been able to withstand potential opposition to such a proposal.

THE POLITICAL VALUE of the budget is not in the least undermined by the second thoughts that are being expressed even by those who at first gave the profits tax complete support. Nor is it likely to be weakened by the vehement opposition which is coming from part of our financial press in a manner reminiscent of Wall Street in its most bitter anti-Roosevelt mood. Some of the criticism is obviously valid. The tax, in its present form, will apply against growth of profits between the average of 1933-34-35 and the taxable year.

There is no uniform reason for such growth of profits, valid for all companies and industries. In some cases profits have grown simply because the swing of economic recovery has brought prosperity instead of depression. There is nothing reprehensible in that, say the critics, and it is obviously unjust to tax the recovery side of the trade cycle. In many cases profits have grown as the result of special enterprise and initiative; are they to be taxed and the conservative stick-in-the-mud left free? Are the highly protected domestic industries which have held constant semi-monopoly profits to be untaxed, while struggling export industries pay penalty for having recovered from depression?

But despite all such criticism, which summed up make most economists judge the tax bad in economic principle, the political appeal of the proposal is very strong, partly because the principle is so easily stated and has the appearance of justice. Let those pay more who have more income now than they had before; what could be more reasonable?

NO SOONER had the public accustomed itself to the new tax than the government announced its intention of settling the coal royalty problem. These royalties are owned by individual land owners, and their burden on the industry is in total fairly heavy and is very unevenly distributed over the coal fields. The present distribution of prosperity in the coal fields is nothing like what it was in the days when royalties were fixed. The principle of government purchase of royalties, the service of the debt incurred in buying out the present owners to be distributed evenly over the whole industry, has been accepted for many years. The problem was at what price to value the claims.

The Samuel commission said that a fair value would be about 20 years purchase, or about £90,000,000. The coal owners have recently been asking £150,000,000. Some weeks ago the government appointed a committee to advise. That committee has just reported that 15 years is the right figure, which leaves the coal royalty owners only £66,000,000. The government has accepted the decision, announced that it will proceed to settle the matter as soon as possible. If this step had been taken by Labor, the government would have been harried to death for Socialist expropriation. Now the Conservative government does what would be forbidden to Labor, and there is no appeal by the royalty owners to any Supreme Court against expropriation of property. In fact some of our die-hards are saying that what England lacks is a good written constitution and a Supreme Court to protect the country against these rampant conservatives!

Vallee and Browning

By William Lyon Phelps

In Three-Fourths Time.

Recently I received the following letter from G. G. Cornwell, who took my course in college in Tennyson and Browning when he was an undergraduate in 1924. He asked me if I remembered an incident that occurred one spring morning about 14 years ago:

• • • •

"You asked the class to turn to the back of the Browning book and there find a score of music which was worthy of note because it was a march in ¾-time. The music was written by Charles Avison and the words by Browning.

"You asked me if anyone in the class played a musical instrument. There being a scarcity of volunteers, I 'stuck out my neck.' I recall a rather peculiar feeling inside when you asked me to bring my violin in at the next class and to play over this march.

"I knew I couldn't let you down, and I also knew that I could not perform. Consequently, for the next several days every thought was concentrated on how to handle the situation and before a solution was reached one class had been cut.

"I went to two boys who played saxophones in the Commons Orchestra and there did one of the best sales jobs of my life. At this late date I am sure you will excuse me when I tell you that I even promised them a sure pass in 'T and B' the following year. With the addition of numerous other broad promises, pleadings, and pressure I succeeded in getting them to bring their instruments into the next class and playing Browning's march as a duet. It seemed to go off quite well and everybody was satisfied, most particularly myself.

"The thing I often wondered was whether you knew who the boys were that played the march. They were Rudy Vallee and Bud Weber, who is at the present time Rudy's librarian."

• • • •

I sent this letter to Rudy Vallee, who replied: "Of course I recall the incident in your Browning Class when I played a march in three-quarter time which I also played one evening at the Lawn Club and I recall how you came out, pleased at hearing it."

Bi-Party Bloc Demands State Relief Control

Move Gains Force for $850,000,000 Fund, End of WPA.

By the Associated Press.

Conservative Democrats and Senate Republicans headed toward the same economy goal yesterday with a demand that relief administration be returned to the States.

Republicans, who incorporated such a policy in their party platform last year, were expected to stand almost unanimously for State control of relief spending. Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, said a big group of Conservative Democrats were ready to join them.

The quasi "coalition," he said, would support the bill by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, to dismantle WPA as a Federal project and appropriate $850,000,000 to be matched by State aid for relief work.

Urge for action swept toward the House where minority leaders called Republicans to a Tuesday night conference in which the intertwined issues of economy and relief probably will be discussed.

Representative Woodruff (Republican), Michigan, conference chairman, said economy was a proper subject for discussion because "we have got to begin real economizing or we are going to be headed for complete economic destruction."

"The Administration," he said, "never has done anything but shadow box with economy."

President Calls Parley.

President Roosevelt has summoned Senate and House leaders to conference on the "general legislative situation when he returns to the White House on May 14. Some believed economy and relief would be prominent topics.

Senate "middle-of-the-road" Democrats, likewise advocating economy, threw their support to the plan by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, to increase State participation in the cost of relief but continue Federal administration.

Byrnes proposed that States match Federal funds on their relief projects, and observers generally believed his plan a likely compromise between the Administration view and the Republican-Conservative Democrat plan.

Representatives Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, and Cannon (Democrat), Missouri, urged the House to stick to the latter's proposal that the President be given discretionary power to impound 15 per cent of all appropriations. The money would revert to the Treasury unless the President decided it was needed.

Mandatory Cut Backed.

Senate conservatives have given support to a proposal for mandatory 10 per cent cut in all 1938 appropriations—a suggestion which bears the indorsement of the Senate majority leader, Robinson, of Arkansas.

Neither branch has suggested specific cuts as to the amount and the particular appropriation. Both proposed to blanket in a stated percentage by which all appropriations were to be reduced after they had been made and leave it to the various Government department heads to determine where the ax shall fall.

House Republicans sharply contended Congress itself should designate where and to what extent expenses were reduced.

fight the President faces. O'Mahoney has been a firm Administration man, has held high office under President Roosevelt and still is an ardent admirer.

A firmer opposition tone also was found last night in a prediction by Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, that the Senate Judiciary Committee will report the bill unfavorably and by a wider margin than previously had been forecast. The Hoosier said an 11-to-7 vote is possible instead of the 10-8 generally expected.

The bitter-end element among the opposition to the plan conceded, in Wheelers words yesterday, that a proposal for an increase of two justices in Supreme Court personnel, as against the contingent six-justice increase asked by Mr. Roosevelt, would swing over some Senators, but contended they have the numerical strength for effective filibustering.

"We have a majority of the Senate against the plan for six new justices," Wheeler said. "If they try to get two, we'll filibuster it all summer. But we have the votes against the six and wouldn't have to filibuster."

The President was quoted in dispatches from Galveston last night as having said during his first press conference of the fishing trip that he plans general legislative conferences with Congressional leaders immediately upon his return here. It was assumed his first effort will be toward a solution of the court plan tangle.

Opposition leaders, in a week-end conference, developed sentiment for a showdown on the Roosevelt bill in the Senate Judiciary Committee which they hoped would bring a line-up of at least 11 to 7 against the measure. A number of the bill's foes agreed to accept the proposal of Senator Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, for a showdown vote on the bill as it stands before voting on any amendments looking toward compromise.

Logan proposed this method to the committee last week. He said if the committee voted against the President's bill, he then would be ready to support a compromise. Logan supports the bill.

In some quarters it was suggested such a showdown vote, if it resulted one sidedly against the Roosevelt bill, might bring a compromise from the Administration.

Opposition leaders, at their week-end meeting, discussed a number of suggested compromises, but reached no agreement. They still insisted they would oppose all modifications.

For the first time, the opposition conference was attended by Senators Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, and McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, three Senators who recently declared against the bill.

Stock Market Crash in 1939 Predicted by Dawes in Book

'How Long Prosperity' Is Title of Volume Which Answers Question in Detail; Warns Against Speculation.

Chicago, May 9.—Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, who forecast the end of the depression, predicted in a book for release tomorrow that 1939 would bring "another stock market collapse and a minor recession in business" lasting one or two years.

The Chicago banker and former Vice President wrote:

"I predict, barring wars or inflation of the currency, that a high degree of prosperity will maintain in this country until 1939.

"That beginning in the latter part of the year October, 1938-October, 1939, to wit: In the summer or fall of 1939, there will be a stock market collapse.

"That there will then ensue in the United States a minor recession in business of one to two years.

"That this recession will be followed by a period of prosperity."

In the book, "How Long Prosperity," Dawes traced a similarity in the history of the depressions of 1873, 1893 and 1929 and concluded that the next market collapse should follow the last by approximately ten years.

"The question now uppermost in the businessman's mind is prosperity—how great and how long?" he wrote. "This book endeavors to answer the question."

The book recites that Dawes, in December, 1934, predicted a contra-seasonal rise in demand for durable goods that would signalize the end of the depression. His forecast was made in an address before the Chicago Association of Commerce and attracted Nation-wide attention.

Of his forecast he wrote:

"Validating this prediction there commenced, on July 5, 1935, the sustained rise in steel demand which now 20 months later (April 1937) still continues.

"Current business commentators, in my judgment, have thus far considerably underestimated the extent during the next two years of coming prosperity and business activity in all lines, especially in fundamental durable goods including iron and steel.

"We now are still facing a great stored-up potential demand for durable goods, and it is already pressing upon production capacity in finished iron and steel. In general it can be said that, other things being equal, the present back-log of the steel and iron industry should insure it a continuance of strong demand and prosperous conditions for at least two years."

He called steel and iron the "mainstay" of the coming prosperity.

He said he did not share the view that the present over-supply of loanable funds and unusual credit creating facilities would tend to hasten another speculative credit collapse.

"There seldom has been a time of so-called easy money when it was more difficult to negotiate unsound loans than at present, or when fewer such negotiations were initiated," he wrote.

In his prediction of the 1939 slumps, Dawes contended Government regulation could not prevent a future market panic.

"While we should commend present Governmental measures to check undue speculation by the regulation and curtailment of certain banking and stock exchange credit operations and facilities, these will not prevent recurring manifestations of mass folly during the latter portions of periods of prosperity.

"Many have assumed that the collapse of the stock market causes the later depressions. * * * The truth is that both are caused by the same thing—a fundamental change in the attitude of the average business man resulting from a sudden loss of confidence on his part, the first manifestation of which occurs on the stock exchange."

China, Alarmed By British Talk, Seeks U. S. Aid

London-Tokyo Parleys Feared as New Move for Partition.

that the generalissimo appointed Dr. Kung, second ranking statesman of the republic, to attend the coronation.

Kung arrived in London some days ago and after preliminary investigation telephoned the results of his findings to Chiang.

For some time the Nanking government has noted with increasing uneasiness that the progress of talks in London between Britain and Japan, fearing that these negotiations will result in a two-power understanding to divide China into spheres of economic influence.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden has specifically denied any such intention, but his denials have been so phrased that Chinese fears continue unabated.

Ambassador Wang sailed for San Francisco en route to Washington last week and should reach the United States Capital about June 1. At his earliest opportunity, it was understood, he will lay the latest information of the Chinese foreign office before the State Department, informally, and suggest that the United States, as a signatory of the Washington conference agreements guaranteeing China's integrity, should use its good offices to prevent any Anglo-Japanese move which would curtail China's independence, either directly or indirectly, and incidentally damage American trade.

The situation was discussed during the week-end by the generalissimo, the foreign minister and Dr. Wang Ching-Wei, former premier. They agreed that the United States was the government best able to restrain both London and Tokyo from any moves which might be damaging to this country.

Meanwhile newspapers bluntly warned London not to expect China to sit idly by while Britain and Japan "make a private deal." The powerful Shainghai daily, Shun Pao, in an officially inspired editorial, blamed Britain for tolerating, if not encouraging, Japanese aggression during the Manchurian wars on the theory that if Japan were granted a free hand in North China she would not menace huge British trade interests in Central and South China.

"We believe now," the newspaper said, "that Japan has offered to agree to respect Britain's position in Central and South China in return for Britain's recognition of Japan's 'special position' in northern Asia."

Britain does not want to see a new Chinese-Japanese war, Shun Pao continued, because a war anywhere at this time would be certain to have dangerous world repercussions and would damage trade in the Far East.

Hence London now poses as a mediator between Nanking and Tokyo.

"We do not charge Britain with insincerity," the newspaper said "but we do state frankly that her attitude is not governed solely by considerations for the welfare of China."

Other newspapers believed that if Dr. Wang can induce the United States to exercise its influence "the deadlock which has prevailed in the Far East for the last fifive years will be broken." They warned, however, that China will not abandon her efforts to recover her former Manchurian provinces which were seized by the Japanese army in the wars of 1931-33 and made into the independent state of Manchukuo.

Johnstown Flood To Be Reproduced By Pail of Water

Pittsburgh, May 9 (AP).—The control of flood disasters is forecast in a new, unique testing model waterway system, in which, it was announced here today, a small pail of water would reproduce the great Johnstown flood of 1899.

The new invention has been set up in the hydraulic research laboratory of the Carnegie Institute of Technology under the direction of United States Army engineers.

It is a system of troughs depicting the 19,000-square miles in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia drained by the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers and their tributaries and, in addition, a strip of the Ohio basin 60 miles below Pittsburgh.

The basins, hills and mountains are shown and in the troughs and any flood that ever rolled out of this terrain can be reproduced with a few gallons of water. The toyland floods will show two hitherto unpredictable things on which the safety from such disaster depends.

One is the height of the "flood wave," or crest, that causes the destruction. Failure last year to predict within 10 feet the height of the Pittsburgh crest cost the city many millions of dollars. The other is the best location for run-off reservoirs to retard the gathering water.

Stars of Films In Combine to Back a 'Goat'

Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Others Purchase a Likely Yearling.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, May 9.—Burly Clark Gable, slow-motion racehorse fancier, bought another oatburner, but rallied a syndicate to help him with the hay bill.

The year-old bay colt has more managers than Primo Carnera, including Jack Conway, Jean Harlow, Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan and Una Merkel—all articled to split the upkeep and share the purses, if any.

Charles Brown, local breeder, was the owner of the colt. He hired it out to play an extra bit in "Saratoga" on the Metro lot, where the steed fell under the attention of old Col. Gable.

"That," observed Gable, "looks like a racehorse."

"Sure enough," boasted Brown. "It has the same number of legs as Man o' War."

"I think," returned Gable, "that I'll buy it."

"Let's all buy it," suggested Miss Harlow, and right there the syndicate was formed.

Named Saratoga.

The corporation has named the nag Saratoga, after their picture, and it will probably debut as a 2-year-old on the Santa Anita strip next winter.

Gable has arranged to train the beast on his San Fernando ranch, where Beverly Hills, his first venture in the racing game, is retired to domesticity. She expects the stork after a brilliant career of also running.

No colors have yet been decided on, but they will probably be split six ways, too, like fancy ice cream at a garden party.

"Up They Go."

Redheaded Ann Shirley, 19-year-old ingenue, will be given a three-year course of training as a leading lady, during which her costumes, makeup, coiffure and accent will be completely made over, RKO-Radiomen announce. Meanwhile, Dickie Moore, a lass discovered in the Ben Bard playhouse, a local "Little Theater," has been signed to fill Shirley's shoes.

Changing pace on their annual "Gold Diggers," the Messrs. Warner will title the 1936 version "Gold Diggers in London," and are already building a permanent "Trafalgar Square" set as principal unit in the English background. Cast so far are Dick Powell, Joan Blondell, Ian Hunter, Hugh Herbert and Jane Wyman.

Joel McCrea wins the lead in Frank Lloyd's "Cavalcade of the West," currently titled "An Empire Is Born." Lloyd, incidentally, directed the original "Cavalcade." Bob Burns, in a straight role, is the only other actor cast so far.

Rialto

Foremost of the two major offerings, opening yesterday, is "Now and Forever," a story of a small child involved in the meshes of criminality, in which the outstanding roles are played by Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard, Shirley Temple and the late Sir Guy Standing. The picture is exceedingly well done from every aspect of acting, production, direction and photography. The narrative has always struck this typewriter as a little off the right track for the things that Shirley Temple ought to be in, but that has been corrected in later years.

The other half of the feature bill is "Every Night at Eight," in which the stellar roles are played by George Raft, Alice Faye, Frances Langford, Patsy Kelly, Walter Catlett, Herman Bing and a considerable list of lesser lights. The story is substantial enough to string together a notable list of songs by the Misses Faye and Langford and to give Raft a chance to be his belligerent self.

Among the songs that will be remembered from this subject are "I'm in the Mood for Love," "Then You've Never Been Blue," "I Feel a Song Coming On," "Speaking Confidentially," "Take it Easy" and "Every Night at Eight." Remember?

Little

With Gary Cooper and Ann Harding in the principal roles, the film version of George Du Maurier's novel of "Peter Ibbetson," as produced by Paramount, is being revived as chief feature of the film bill at the Little Theater this week.

There has never been a more romantic stage play or film drama than this. The piece was played first in Washington on the Stage of the Belasco Theater, with John Barrymore in the title role; Constance Collier, as Mary, Duchess of Towers, and Lionel Barrymore in the part of the Duke of Towers. The screen play presents John Halliday, as head of the supporting cast, with Douguas Dumbrille, Virginia Weidler, Dickie Moore, Doris Lloyd, Christian Rub, Donald Meek, Gilbert Emery, Adrienne D'Ambricourt, Colin Tapley, and many more in support.

The story is one of an imperishable love that will win its way to the hearts—and probably the tear ducts—of every member of any audience. Gary Cooper is not a John Barrymore and Miss Harding, we regret to say, is not a Constance Collier, but their performances will carry full weight, nevertheless, to those who do not remember the play on the boards.

Gayety

"GIRLS IN BLUE." An Independent Burlesque Association attraction in 2 acts and 25 scenes, starring Ann Corio, supported by Nona Martin, Max Furman, Josie Carroll, Kay Johnson, Alma Maiben, June Gordon, Gladys Furman, Honey and Tody, Eddie Innis, Joey Twain, Joey Shaw, Harry Lander and Eddie Aiken. Dance numbers produced by Max Furman. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by Art John.

Ann Curio, the pride of Hartford, Conn., and the most beautiful girl in burlesque, is making her farewell appearance at the Gayety Theater this season with her current revue entitled "Girls in Blue."

There is little we can add to the many praises which already have been sung of the lovely Ann, except to say she grows more beautiful with each succeeding visit. Miss Curio may not be able to sing or dance like some of the other feminine stars who have appeared here, but what talents she doesn't have in this respect she certainly doesn't need. Appearing in several beauty parades and wearing some of the most stunning clothes we've ever seen on a female star here, Ann is a true example of what the song, "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," really means.

Ann Strongly Supported.

Nona Martin and Josie Carroll, two other fair ladies of the cast, also offer something novel in feminine entertainment. Miss Martin, while coming through with several classy dance routines, really shines in a comedy skit in support of Harry Landers. In this, Nona gives an exhibition of acting that is sure to make her popularity soar as a "talking woman." Miss Carroll's musical specialties include songs well sung. The more she sang the better we enjoyed them.

Max Furman and Harry Landers are particularly effective in their comedy roles, with Furman smashing through with several laugh skits of an amusing and original nature. Eddie Aiken and Eddie Innis are competent in their straight-man characters, with Innis also contributing several songs and impressions of famous stage actors.

Others in the cast who lend much effect to this sparkling revue are Joey Shaw, who delivers several vocal orations; Honey and Tody, who shine in the dance department, and the clever dance routines by the girls of the ensemble.

Boston Police Guard Supreme Court Judge

Boston, May 9 (AP).—Boston police tonight revealed they were guarding Judge Harry Manser, of the Maine Supreme Court, during a stay in Boston to attend a convention of the New England order of protection.

The guard was established because of threatening tenor of some of the hundreds of letters he received since he pailed six leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization after recent labor disorders in the Lewiston-Auburn shoe strike.

Actors Fund Benefit of "Follies" at the National On Friday Ranks as Week's Foremost Theater Event

Fannie Brice, Bobby Clark and All Members of the Cast to Appear in Extra Matinee at Regular Prices With No Tax; Shep Fields' Arrangements Take Rank With Best in Capital; Katharine Cornell in Philadelphia Tonight; A Word of Pulitzer Prize Award; News Notes of the Current Theater World.

FROM an altruistic and humanitarian point of view, perhaps the most important theatrical event of the week in Washington will be the special Actors Fund Benefit matinee, to be presented by the "Ziegfeld Follies" company on Friday afternoon.

BELL.

This will be, of course, just another performance of the "Follies," but with all the stars of the cast taking part. It will be at the usual scale of house prices assessed at the National and no amusement tax will be imposed since the enterprise is a charitable undertaking.

Having been associated with Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors Fund and dean of the American theater, in many earlier Fund Benefits in Washington, I feel that I know something of the value of the work that is carried on under these auspices. There is probably no charitable fund in the world administered at so small a cost as the Actors Fund. Practically all of the proceeds of these benefits are devoted to the support of aged members of the professional theater who find it no longer possible to earn a living.

The Actors Fund Home now, I am led to believe, is in Englewood, N. J., instead of on its former site on Staten Island. Here the members of the profession who find it no longer possible to be self-supporting are sustained in comfort and are set free from the cares of an indigent old-age. They are provided with all of the ordinary necessities of life, given a small amount of spending money and otherwise imbued with the idea of a sort of independence after years of catering to the amusement urges of the paying patrons of the theater.

A great deal is said and written about the fabulous salaries that stage stars receive, but considering the short lives of many engagements and the long waits between casting assignments, the thing averages down to possibly less than you and I get for a year's work. It is against this contingency that the Actors Fund and its benefactions are poised.

It is interesting, in this connection that the Actors Fund was established many years ago by a group of, I think, 248 leaders in the art of Thespis. They perceived the need of some relief from the inevitable penury that dogged the heels of members of their calling who had never earned, or had dissipated, enough material wealth to guard against the ravages of old age and a professional incapacity to carry on.

Out of this 248, the only surviving member is Daniel Frohman, who still serves as president and guiding genius of the Actors Fund of America. He is the idol of the theater—the one man to whom those in need may look when they are in need of succor.

I can not too strongly advocate a generous patronage of this benefit matinee of the "Follies" on Friday. It is one of the most authentic and worthy charities of which I am aware.

Fannie Brice, Bobby Clark and a host of other stars lend their talents to this revue, which, needless to say, will be completely reviewd in this space on Tuesday morning. In the meantime, get your tickets. You will be well repaid.

* * * *

It is a vagrant thought, but, nevertheless, a persistent one, that one of the chief claims to fame to which Shep Fields and His Orchestra, headlining the stage bill at the Earle this week, can lay claim rests in the perfection of the arrangements which they play. Not since Ferde Grofe served as chief arranger for Paul Whiteman have I heard more devastating musical transcriptions than characterize the program being presented by Fields and his crew. I don't know who is responsible, but there is someone in the organization who knows how.

* * * *

There is a good deal of discussion being bandied about, as usual, concerning the bestowal of the Pulitzer Prize award upon "You Can't Take It With You," reputedly one of their best comedies by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, current in New York.

Many seem to think that the accolade should have been laid again on the shoulders of Maxwell Anderson, who won the Drama Critic Circle of New York award with his "High Tor." There is always this incipient rebellion at the judgment of those assigned to appraise the year's dramatic product.

Having seen neither of these items on a Washington stage, I find myself in a position that completely precludes a personal expression as to comparative merits. They must both be pretty good plays.

George S. Kaufman, by the way, was half owner of a previous Pulitzer award for his half of the authoring of "Of Thee We Sing," with Morrie Ryskind. Mr. Anderson has copped the prize several times before on his own. There remains a slight balance to be written off here before Mr. Kaufman can claim full fellowship in the league of unchallenged champions. He is doing pretty well, at that.

And another thing. It has always seemed to me that at least half of the appeal of "Of Thee We Sing" was embodied in the music and lyrics, written, respectively, by George and Ira Gershwin—two of the Jones boys. They have yet to get a favorable nod from the judges. Is that fair?

Katharine Cornell, in case you had forgotten, begins her brief road tour in Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory" and George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" in Philadelphia tonight.

Nation Has 28,221,291 Motor Vehicles Listed

By the Associated Press.

Registration of 28,221,291 motor vehicles in 1936, the Bureau of Public Roads reported yesterday, set an all-time peak for the United States.

The bureau said this was nearly 2,000,000 more than the previous year and 1,700,000 above the former all-time high in 1930.

States received $359,783,000 from the sale of licenses and similar receipts, the bureau said, with trucks and tractor trucks accounting for nearly 24 per cent of the receipts, but less than 15 per cent of the registrations.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, May 9.—Personal Observations: Garry Cooper always makes me feel he would rather use a horse when in a nurry than his low-swung phaeton. Jeannette MacDonald and Jean Harlow have the sit-on-one-foot habit. That hesitating confusion that identifies Frank Morgan's screen portrayals has invaded his real life conversation. The colony lost some of its glamor when cowboy extras gave up the Hollywood-Cahuenga stand. It's easy to guess when Chester Morris's insomnia has been rampant, because he has rubber tires under his eyes.

McDONALD.

Barbara Stanwyck too often misses the ash tray when she flicks her cigarette, even in drawing rooms. Mary Astor's soft speaking voice and mellow eyes belie her diary notoriety. William Powell likes to cup his hands as a chincrutch when talking man-to-man. Dark glasses have become a badge of star privacy, extras now wear them to fool us. Marlene Dietrich's deep-into-your-eyes stare gives me spine tickles.

* * * *

You will know that Miriam Hopkins is about to laugh when a tiny suggestion of a squint tightens her eyes. George Burns would rather be called "Best Dressed Man" than find a swell radio gag. Perhaps it is to emphasize his serious quality that Franchot Tone dons spectacles during important discussions. When Elissa Landi does not want to meet set-visitors, she starts scribbling so the assistant director can say she is working on her new novel. Nothing is quite so cheerful as Shirley Temple's "Hello."

* * * *

Harry P. Edington and I have the same dentist. Edington, in case you do not know, is the astute manager who had the swell hunch to put Greta Garbo on a silence diet, and has that idea paid dividends! At any rate, when I plumped into the dentist's chair today to hear the worst, Doc told me that Edington had been in with a jumping toothache. The manager was at M. G. M. Studio ten miles away when a raw nerve opened fire. He leaped into his car and raced with the wind to the dentist.

* * * *

"As he came through the door," the Doc said, "Harry looked at his watch and cracked, 'Well, if any cops are chasing me for speeding, they'll get here in three minutes!'".

* * * *

Every field of business has its own way of initiating a newcomer. In a machine shop, an apprentice is sent for a "left-handed money wrench." In a print shop, he is ordered off in quest of a "column stretcher." Doris Weston, a stage actress recently out of New York, got her introduction to movie tomfoolery on a Dick Powell set the other day.

* * * *

"The scene called for her to hasten across a room and fling open a door. But the door refused to budge. The director cried "Cut!" Whereupon Powell walked across the set and opened the door with one finger. "I suppose you'll be blaming your blunder on the carpenters," he told her. And while Miss Weston blushed over that one, the director snapped, "Are you all thumbs, Doris?"

* * * *

Of course, they had to explain to the embarrassed girl that two burly stage hands were holding the door when she tried it, and that the cameras were not turning at all. It strikes me that in some ways, Hollywood is more cruel with its newcomers than other trades—so many people are standing around watching.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Squeezing Out a Game.

Every partnership must determine which suit to name as trump and how high to bid. The great advantage of the strong (two-way) opening three-bid is that it solves the first of these problems automatically and permits the players to concentrate on the second from the very beginning.

Note that in the hand below North raised South's spade bid even though he had not a single spade in his hand. South's opening bid had guaranteed a suit which needed no support and had urged North to take action with about one honor-trick. The raise was North's best response, his weakness in the black suits barring notrump.

Both sides vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth-best club, East winning with the Queen. South ruffed the club continuation, and drew three rounds of trumps. His next play was a low heart to dummy's ten, East's Jack winning the trick.

Foreseeing trouble in exiting, East cashed the King of hearts before laying down the King of clubs. South trumped the King of clubs and ran the rest of his trumps, saving a heart and two diamonds in the dummy.

Obliged to come down to three cards, East could not hold the Ace of hearts and a diamond stopper. When he blanked the diamond honors, declarer took dummy's Ace and cashed the King of diamonds, after which his nine was good for the tenth trick.

New York, May 9.

FEATURE STORY: Mr. and Mrs. Heywood Broun attended a dinner party at the White House, and the columnist observed his wife conversing intently with the President . . . Later, Broun asked: "Did you have a nice talk, dear?" . . . "Oh, it was wonderful," his wife gushed . . . "What did you and the President talk about?" Broun continued . . . "Oh, the King," Mrs. Broun informed "—and Mrs. Simpson!"

CRIME NEWS: Morris Gest went backstage of the Hudson Theater to see his friend Clarence Derwent, who is appearing in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" there. Gest found Derwent very much distressed—for a sneak thief had entered his dressing room and stole $300 cash as well as his father's watch . . . Mr. Derwent, in the play, portrays the role of the most notorious thief of his day!

BEAUTY DEPT.: As a result of the ban on burlesque, most of the cafe owners have been busy this week, cleaning up their shows . . . At the Harlem Uproar House, Jay Faggen ordered clothes for his nudes and then went to the Paradise to see what Nicky Blair had done to purify that show . . . The first surprise came when Janis Andre, the nude who rides a white horse, made her appearance—attired in a dress . . . Faggen stared at this strange spectacle, turned to Blair and sighed: "You'll never get away with it. That horse is stark naked."

PET DEPT.: Linton Wells brought back a baby leopard from Ethiopia. He and his wife dined at Thyra Samter Winslow's home. Alan Campbell and Dorothy Parker Campbell were present and listened to the entire group discussing the leopard before dinner . . . After the dessert was served, Mrs. Campbell turned to the hostess and said: "Shall we go inside—and rejoin the leopard?"

BOOK DEPT.: In Charlie Washburn's new book, "Press-Agentry," the author explains why Anne Nichols fired him and then rehired him as publicist for "Abie's Irish Rose." During the Chicago run, while other plays advertised "Original New York Cast," Washburn placed an ad: "Positively the original Erie, Pa., company, intact." . . . And Robert Riskin, now a scenarist, didn't like Washburn's Thanksgiving Day advertisement: "Have your Thanksgiving dinner at 1 o'clock and then see the play at 3 o'clock. One turkey after another!"

SPORTS DEPT.: Natalie Cantor, daughter of Eddie Cantor, was married last week in Hollywood . . . Just before the ceremony, Mrs. Cantor turned to her beaming husband and said: "'Well, what have you to say?" . . . "One down," Cantor replied, "and four to go."

BUSINESS DEPT.: A few days ago an ad appeared in the local papers offering the Rolls Royce of the former Prince of Wales to any purchaser willing to buy it. The car is in the hands of a London dealer now . . . Last week the owner of one of Broadway's rowdiest night spots cabled an offer of $3,000. He wants the car for the purpose of parking it in front of his cafe—to transport patrons from the club to their homes.

* * * *

TRAVEL DEPT.: George S. Kaufman, who refuses to enter a plane, spoke to Leland Hayward about Herman Manchiewicz's love for aviation . . . "I have a compliment for you," Kaufman told Hayward. "I heard somebody say they'd rather fly with you than fly with Manciewicz. Personally, I'd rather fly with you than walk with Manchiewicz!"

* * * *

NEWS DEPT.: E. B. Butler, correspondent for the London Times, dined at Le Mirage, when he heard of the Hindenburg disaster. "May I phone long distance?" he asked Proprietor Frank Cerutti. Butler phoned the London Times, and then borrowed Cerutti's car to drive to Lakehurst . . . Ten minutes later the police phoned Le Mirage. They had arrested Butler for speeding and for driving without an owner's or driver's license. Cerutti explained the emergency, and Butler was allowed to continue. The police escorted him to the Holland Tunnel, notified the Jersey police—who escorted him straight to Lakehurst . . . "I don't know which will be the greater story in London," Butler later reported, "the Hindenburg explosion or the courtesy of the New York police!"

* * * *

LABOR DEPT.: Lillian Hellman, who is working on the screen play of "Dead End," saw the picket line in front of the Goldwyn lot. She phoned the producer and stated: "I'm on the side of labor, and don't like to walk past a picket line. I'm worried, I don't know what to do" . . . "Well," Goldwyn directed, "then go home—and work!"

Berlin Bishop Warns Against Reich Campaign

Berlin, May 9 (AP).—Count Konrad von Preysing, Bishop of Berlin, today vigorously defended catholicism against what he called an anti-church campaign. It was the Catholic leader's reply to the Reich's recent series of immorality trials.

In a letter read in Catholic churches, he charged that attacks and accusations are being made against church authorities as though they ignored or tolerated occurrances which the church condemns.

"The church does not object to sentence being passed on culprits," the bishop's letter said, "but it does object emphatically to methods used systematically and with all means of propaganda, to assail the church, its teachings and its servants."

"Do not be deceived," the letter said. "Very powerful loud-voiced forces are at work which are utilizing the present trials, coming just after a papal encyclical, to depreciate the Pope's utterances and represent Christian education of youth as undesirable."

Films to Show RedCrossWork In Flood Areas

The story of Red Cross relief administered to a quarter million families in America during the Ohio-Mississippi floods will be presented at Constitution Hall tonight as the highlight of the opening day of a four-day convention here.

With motion pictures, music and pageantry, an elaborate program will be staged, to be followed with discussion of plans for next year. Another important event today will be discussion of the Red Cross highway safety plans.

Tomorrow the Red Cross will do honor to a volunteer worker who has refused to let the organization pay her any money, either salary or expenses, for 37 years, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, volunteer executive. Co-workers and Federal executives will tender her a banquet at the Willard.

Vanguard Arrives.

The advance guard of 2,000 delegates yesterday began filtering into Washington and placed their registrations at national headquarters. Of the 2,000, more than 300 will be made up of boys and girls, delegates to the American Junior Red Cross convention.

The opening session today will be called to order at 10:30 a. m. by Brig. Gen. Frank R. Keefer, chairman of the District of Columbia chapter. A concert by the United States Navy Orchestra will precede the call to order. Invocation will be read by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church.

To Review Work.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, will review disaster relief in this year's major catastrophes and sketch plans for future work in similar fields for the mercy organization.

Another feature today will be greetings from Vicomte Bonabes de Rouge, representing 61 nations. Donald Turner, high school boy, will speak for the 8,000,000 members of the American Junior Red Cross.

Police Trap Pair In Blackmail Plot

Cohasset, Mass., May 9 (AP).—Police Chief Hector Pelletier, posing as a butler while a fellow officer hid behind heavy curtains, today arrested two men and charged them with attempting to extort $100 from Hugh Bancroft, wealthy young society sportsman, by blackmail.

The men, who gave their names as William H. O'Brien, 51, and Francis P. Ferry, 41, both of Boston, threatened to publicize "certain unfavorable" pictures of Bancroft, Pelletier said.

The police set the trap when Bancroft summoned them and said he had received an anonymous telephone call from a man who wished to see him on "urgent business." Bancroft made an appointment with the man at his home.

On the Air Today

One of the most popular questions of the week-end was: "Did you hear that actual eyewitness description of the burning of the Hindenburg Friday night?"

Without any hesitation whatever, I would say that Robert Morrison's description of the scene is the most thrilling broadcast to come through my loud speaker in many years of listening—and I throw in the earliest days of radio, when many a thrill came through ear phones.

Morrison is a Chicago announcer, on the staff of of WLS. He was at Lakehurst to make a routine sound effect recording of the arrival of the ship. The first minute of the recording was given over to a calm description of the grace and beauty of the Hindenburg as she prepared to land. In the middle of a sentence, Morrison's voice, shocked and almost instantly hysterical, announces that first burst of flame.

From that point on, the Chicago announcer answered the question which might well have been in your mind: What is the emotional reaction to a horrible and awesome spectacle, such as the burning of the great ship? He had a microphone in his hand and he bravely made words, just as though there were a radio audience. It was three or four minutes before his hysteria calmed.

Several times Morrison, with dramatic force and sincerity, announced he could not talk. Once he said, "If I could only swallow, my throat is dry"—and finally called to the engineer running the record turntable to fade him out in order that he could compose himself.

The force of the explosion is recorded on the transcription as it threw the recording needle from its groove.

Morrison definitely contributed to radio archives, unwillingly and with no little courage. The National Broadcasting Co., in presenting the transcription on its combined networks, broke a rigid rule of ten years' standing prohibiting the playing of a transcription on a network.

Steel Industry Operating Rate Steady at 91%

Pace Maintained Despite Time Lost Making Repairs.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 9.—With large specification backlogs in practically every line of steel production, the present lull in buying, contrasting sharply with feverish activity a few weeks ago, is welcome to mills and conditions grow easier each week, says Steel.

With statistics showing records or near records in almost every department, no apprehension is felt over the quieter situation. Producers, for the most part, have too much domestic business to accept much of the attractive export inquiry, even at the tempting premiums offered. A Valley interest has booked 25,000 tons of pig iron for Japan at $2 over the domestic market.

With steel mills exerting every effort to hold production high in the effort to meet demands, the national operating rate is steady at 91 per cent of capacity, in spite of necessary repairs that tend to reduce output from time to time. Pittsburgh has gained 3 points, to 93 per cent; Eastern Pennsylvania 3 points, to 73½; Wheeling 6 points, to 94, and Cincinnati 4 points, to 94 per cent. Chicago lost 2½ points, to 83 per cent; Youngstown 4 points, to 83; Buffalo 1 point, to 92, and New England 3 points, to 90 per cent. Cleveland at 79 per cent, Birmingham at 83, Detroit at 100 and St. Louis at 94 made no change.

Production of steel ingots in April totaled 5,017,875 gross tons, at 90.27 per cent of capacity. The shorter month gave a total slightly under March, but the percentage of capacity then was only 89.91. However, the April total has been exceeded only in March and in May, 1929. April produced nearly 30 per cent more ingots than the same month of 1936. Production for four months of 1937 is almost 50 per cent larger than for all 1932.

March exports of steel scrap set an all-time record with 362,249 tons. For first quarter scrap exports were 586,369 tons. Steel exports without scrap in March totaled 208,327 tons, the highest month since July, 1929, a gain of 59 per cent over those of February and 118 per cent over March, 1936. For first quarter exports, exclusive of scrap, were 476,886 tons, 91.5 per cent over first quarter of last year.

By putting out 2,050 more cars last week than the week before the automotive industry established an all-time record for a single week with a total of 141,525 cars. This compares with the previous high of 140,800 cars during one week of April, 1929. General Motors produced 56,550 cars; Ford, 35,875, and Chrysler, 32,000. Placing of 9,772 freight cars in April brought the total for four months to 40,705, the highest for that period since 1929. Continued purchase of cars in May gives promise of sustaining high rate.

Continued decline in scrap prices has carried the composite of steel-making grades 81 cents lower, to $18.79, equaling the level of the first week of February. The same influence caused a decline of 11 cents in the iron and steel composite, to $40.14. The finished steel composite remains unchanged at $61.70.

Lumber Shipments Increase for Week

The lumber industry during the week ended May 1, stood at 74 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 82 per cent of 1929 shipments.

Reported new orders were slightly below the previous week and the weekly March-April average. Reported production was below the two previous weeks, otherwise heaviest of any 1937 week. Shipments were heaviest of the year to date.

National production reported for the week ended May 1 by 8 per cent fewer mills was 3 per cent less than the output of the preceding week; shipments were 5 per cent above shipments of that week; new order were 2 per cent below that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

Fidelity Life Gains 7.7% Over Year Ago

New paid life insurance of the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Philadelphia for the month of April, 1937, amounted to $2,414,000, an increase of 77 per cent over the corresponding month of 1936, continuing an unbroken record of monthly gains that has been sustained since July 1, 1936, according to a statement made yesterday by Walter LeMar Talbot, president.

Net terminations of insurance for April, 1937, showed a decrease of $337,000, or 13.6 per cent. Insurance in force increased $282,000 during the same month.

The Market

Markets Show More Courage As Trade Continues at High Level.

New York, May 9.—The past week in finance was one of the customary calms that follow the storm. The previous week's heavy setback in speculative markets washed overboard many speculators, leaving the markets largely in charge of the investor who in the recent period of rising prices had been showing less interest.

Greater price stability in bonds, stocks and commodities in the past few days indicates that no real alarm of a bad decline in business activity in early future is anticipated, but rather that temporarily at least the view has been taken that recession will be moderate and temporary.

Passing of the May 1 landmark undoubtedly was an important factor in all markets, for the early heaviness in Government bonds, the drying up of demand for new capital issues, and the all-around uncertainty in speculative markets had raised fears for difficulty at the time the final portion of higher reserve requirements for the banks went into effect. It turned out that full preparations had been made, such as sales of bank holdings of Government securities, and that no further adjustments this week were necessary.

Even the tendency to hold out on lending reserves by banks that had them to others that were deficient came to nothing under a tide of such funds from the interior. The only money rate change of the week was, in fact, in the other direction. Bankers' bill rates were lowered a shade when it appeared that no tightness would develop in the market.

Confidence Returns.

Banks and financial institutions generally felt greater confidence in the high grade bond market and the Government section advanced slowly. It was no longer necessary for the Federal Reserve Banks to support prices and last week no changes in the system's holdings of Government bonds were shown, a fact which in itself was reassuring. For all the reduction in excess reserves, the excess for the country still stands at nearly $900,000,000, which is ample not only to hold the money market easy but to promote rapid expansion in loans later. In other words, the ammunition of higher reserve, requirements now has been used up, but thanks to the country blasts of Federal Reserve purchases of bonds the effect was on balance negligible.

It may be, as a minority section of financial opinion maintains, that the country is not yet ready for restrictive measures; that it still needs the aid of cheap money and other incitement toward expansion. However, that may be, the markets have shown great vulnerability even to mere talk of deflationary action by the authorities, and the chill among business men, fearing cancellation of orders, has been great enough to bring an about face in policy. The gold price change apparently has been buried for a while, and investigation this week scarcely supported the recent rumors of large scale cancellations of orders. New ordering, on the other hand, has been less active as the uprush in commodity prices has stopped, and that is all to the good.

Good Trade Reports.

Most of the week's business indices have been favorable. Railroad freight car loadings rose largely over those of the preceding week and the same period of a year ago and reached a new top for the season. The steel industry receded a point or so in its operating rate, but predictions are that no appreciable decline is likely to take place for several weeks. April production, on a daily basis, was higher than the March output and was the greatest in several years. In spite of sharp increases in wage scales the building industry remains confident that improvement yet will come. Retail trade last month was unusually active.

Except, insofar as the scare over bond prices and the break in markets over rumored gold price cutting a week ago sobered up the high-spending fraternity at Washington, the lifting of the clouds last week showed no material change in the position. Gold continues to come this way in enormous amounts and bank deposits are piling up. The case for inflation can be argued as well as ever on the ground of externals, but whether those in authority to exercise restraint will wish to do so and will be able to carry out such a policy still is a matter for conjecture.

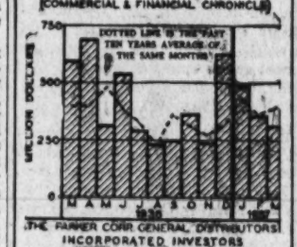
Corporate Financing Is Below Average



Boston, Mass., May 9.—Corporate financing is showing some increase, although still far below the average in the years from 1926 to 1930. First quarter financing surpassed the first three months of 1936 by 10 per cent, but of this total 58 per cent was for refunding.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 3.16 per cent compares with a yield of 3.18 per cent on April 30. Based upon current figures, the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 19.5 times their known earnings, compared with 19.4 times on April 30.

Canadian Dividends 13% Above Year Ago

Toronto, May 8.—Dividend payments by Canadian corporations to their shareholders in the month of April were approximately 13 per cent greater than for similar month of 1936, while the total for the first four months of the current year was 17 per cent in excess of that for similar months of the year before.

Sudden Deaths Last Year Cost $54,200,000

80,000 Policies Were in Force for Less Than a Year.

New York, May 9.—Accident or sudden affliction during 1936 took the lives of 80,000 life insurance policyholders who had passed health examinations and taken out their insurance less than 12 months previous. These premature deaths made wives, children and other dependents beneficiaries of $54,200,000 and gave an average return on premium investment of 2,500 per cent.

This dramatic evidence of the mounting toll of sudden death, principally due to highway accidents, was presented in an annual survey of death claims paid out on insurance policies less than a year old, released today by the Weekly Underwriter, insurance trade paper.

In more than 20,000 cases sudden death struck within three months of the purchase of the policies. In a number of cases, lives were lost through accident before the insurance policies had been delivered; but fortunately for the wives and children, the first premium had been paid when the applications were signed.

Automobile accidents head the list of causes of death during 1936 of insurance policyholders within the year after the policy was issued. The Weekly Underwriter survey showed; other types of accidents came next. Accidents, homicides and suicides accounted for 33 per cent of the total. The next greatest cause of premature death was pneumonia-influenza, with heart disease following closely.

Double indemnity provisions gave beneficiaries of these policyholders a return on premium investment far greater than the average of 2,500 per cent received by the beneficiaries of those holding ordinary life policies.

Capital Society Turning To Season's Tennis Play

1937 Program Being Arranged; Group Reserves St. Alban's School Courts for Three Months; Residence Grounds Also in Demand.

By Dudley Harmon.

Capital society, which has been talking horses, horses, horses for quite a few weeks, is now beginning to turn its attention to tennis. With the Kentucky Derby, the Maryland Hunt Cup and the Washington Horse show things of the past, court enthusiasts who couldn't tell a hunter trial from a point-to-point, are at last commencing to get a few innings in the conversation.

The various country clubs which dot the landscape around Washington already are beginning to be filled with tennis players in the late afternoon and over the week-end. The exhibition held on the cherished "en-tout-cas" courts at the Chevy Chase Club on Saturday were a great success, and equally enjoyable was the tea held afterwards by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker. For several years a member of the Davis Cup committee, Mr. Baker (incidentally, a neighbor of Mr. Dwight Davis on Foxhall road) is one of Washington's most active tennis enthusiasts. Although he seldom plays any more himself, he frequently organizes games on his court, followed by pleasant teas on the lawn.

Making Plans for Season.

The tennis group is already making plans for its 1937 season. About 40 younger people comprise the membership of this organization, which is headed by Leonard Block. Both Mr. and Mrs. Block are "tennis fiends." Others in the group include Miss Dorothy Cassard, Miss Florence Harris, Mr. John Farr Simmons, of the State Department—incidentally, he has one of the best backhands in tennis; Mr. John Lord, also of the department, who is leaving late in June for his new post in Vienna; Mr. Mannix Walker, treasurer of the group; Miss Elizabeth Morrison, Mr. Donald Downs, Mr. Henry Whitney, Mrs. Donald Hiss and Mrs. Charles Smoot.

Unlike some clubs, the group sticks to its main objective—tennis. Members plan to play every afternoon at the courts of the St. Alban's School, which they have reserved for the season. They will start in June and continue for three months.

Fortunately for those who have to spend their summers in this hottest of Capitals, there are numerous private courts. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss open their "en-tout-cas" to their friends, and, if one has been invited, one simply rings up the secretary and asks her to reserve the court.

Give Tennis Teas.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss frequently arrange tennis teas at their home, "Merrywood," on the banks of the Potomac, and the matches are usually followed by a plunge into their delightful pool. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover have a court, and Mr. and Mrs. Dean Acheson are building one on the grounds of their new home in nearby Maryland. Miss Elinor Ryan frequently plays on the court of the home she leases from Mr. and Mrs. David Lawrence. Other "tennists" in the Capital are Mr. Anthony de Balasy, Counselor of the Hungarian Legation; Miss Mary Cootes, District champion, who recently won the women's doubles in the annual invitation tournament at Hot Springs, Va.; Miss Betty Hardie and her housemate, Miss Phyllis Thompson; Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright, Mr. Charles Saint, of the French Embassy; Miss Olivia Stokes, an outstandingly good player, and the Misses Helen and Cynthia Davis, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ellis Entertain Informally at Rippon Lodge

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis entertained informally yesterday afternoon at Rippon Lodge, their country home near Woodbridge, Va. Many friends drove out from Washington to enjoy the fine spring weather at this historic estate, one of the oldest in Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis are planning a series of garden parties there during the next few weeks. On Saturday, May 29, they will be hosts to members of the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Mr. Ellis is a former president of the local chapter. On Sunday afternoon, May 23, they will entertain members of the Archeological Society of Washington, of which Mr. Ellis is president.

They will also be hosts Sunday, June 6, to members of the Susan Riviere Chapter of the D. A. R., of which Mrs. Ellis' sister, Miss Louella Chase, is regent.

Flowers were in bloom everywhere about the estate yesterday. The woods were full of pink and white dogwood and there were violets, pansies, iris, tulips and the first rambler roses, just coming out.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis at first received inside the house but, as the crowd of guests gathered, they went into the garden and greeted them there. Mrs. Ellis wore a blue and white print frock. Tables with refreshments were set under the spreading "coffee" trees which are nearly 200 years old.

The guests went through the old house, built by Col. Blackburn in 1725, made a tour of the gardens and the graveyard where his tombstone identifies him as having come from Rippon, England, and many also went to Cabins Point, the end of the estate extending out into the river, where the slave cabins once were. One of these has been restored by Mr. Ellis and is now furnished with interesting Indian relics.

In the large company of friends who called between the hours of 4 and 7 o'clock were Mrs. William E. Borah and her niece, Miss Mary Louise Bush, Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, Senator and Mrs. Joseph T. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Richardson, Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Judge and Mrs. A. A. Hoehling, Mrs. Charles P. Sisson, Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, accompanied by Miss Helen G. Bulkley and Miss Katharine Bulkley; former Senator and Mrs. George H. Moses, Miss Margaret L. Moore, sister of the Assistant Secretary of State, accompanied by her niece, Miss Mary Walton McCandlish; Dr. and Mrs. Loring Johnson.

Miss Janet Richards also was among the guests, having driven out with Mrs. Ellis' sister, Miss Chase, who assisted in receiving. Mrs. Hamilton Bayley was there as were Mr. and Mrs. Woodson P. Houghton, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Judge H. B. Rudolph, of the Supreme Court of South Dakota, who has been here for the meeting of the Law Institute, accompanied by Mrs. Rudolph and his sister, Miss Entoinette Rudolph, of Pierre, S. Dak.; Col. and Mrs. Olin O. Ellis, of Baltimore; Mrs. George Butler, of South Carolina; Gen. and Mrs. W. W. Ireland, Judge and Mrs. Samuel Wassell and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien.

Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor Reach Hawaii On China Clipper Trip to Japan

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, who are en route to Japan on the China Clipper, arrived in Honolulu yesterday on the first lap of their journey. They were to have left San Francisco last Wednesday, but owing to adverse weather conditions, were delayed until Saturday.

From Honolulu Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor will fly on again to the Philippines for a brief stay and then on to China. They will spend two weeks going up the Yangtze into the interior of China and then on to Tokyo to visit their son-in-law and daughter, the Second Secretary of the American Embassy and Mrs. Cabot Coville.

Returning to this country the end of the summer, they will go to their Nova Scotia estate, Beinn Bhreagh.

Mr. and Mrs. McClure Entertain With Cocktails at Kenwood Home

Mr. and Mrs. John McClure entertained at a large cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home in Kenwood, Md. There were about 250 guests. Mrs. McClure wore a white silk gown with touches of black lace.

Among the guests were Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner, the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, Mme. Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic; Mr. Ricardo Alfaro, former President of Panama, and Senora de De Bayle, wife of the former Minister of Nicaragua.

Miss Emily Cramer Is Engaged To Wed Mr. Charles E. Van Sickle

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Myron C. Cramer, of Manila, P. I., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily Durham Cramer, to Mr. Charles Earle Van Sickle, of Manila. Col. and Mrs. Cramer have served two turns of duties in Washington and are leaving the Philippines shortly to return here again, via a trip to China. The wedding will take place in Washington in the fall.

Kremer's Give Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bruce Kremer entertained at a dinner last evening at their home on Glenbrook road in honor of their house guests, Mrs. Bartow Weeks, Mrs. John Turner and Mr. John Murphy of New York; Mrs. Raymond Hackett, of Stamford, Conn., and Mrs. Herbert Kistler, of Butte, Mont. There were 30 guests, seated at individual tables decorated with sweet peas.

Diplomatic Hostess and Charming Guest

Frau Herbert Scholz (left) wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy, with her sister, Fraulein Gabriele von Schnitzler, who recently arrived to visit in Washington. The latter, who visited Chicago before coming to the Capital, will remain until Frau Scholz sails early in July for a summer in Germany. There doubtless will be many parties in honor of Fraulein von Schnitzler.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

A few whirlographs on the recent and very successful Washington Horse Show, Friday, Saturday and Sunday—

The breathless moment when, during the pony classes, several little fellows astride (bareback at that) shaggy ponies came dashing up to the boxes. One lad, all of eight years, flung himself off his mount and hurried up the steps to the judges stand.

"Please, sir, tell me how much it costs to enter a hoss in this show. I've got 25 cents, is that enough?"

Sadly enough, because of red tape and hard and fast rules, the youngsters, whose ponies' mud-stained hooves and legs gave every indication of having traveled from afar in the hopes of joining the exhibitors, were disappointed.

Diana Rowland inviting George Millholland to go for a ride in the pony cart and George, being used to large and powerful officer's chargers, eyeing the wee black shetland with a bit of doubt in his laughing eyes—

The young lad, who looked like Huck Finn or one of his cronies come to life, arriving on the scene riding a slow, easy-going burro—leaving his mount long enough to join a group of his friends, and the minute his back was turned the sly animal wheeled about and made off in the opposite direction—

Much to the surprise of most of the young things in Washington the morning mail Saturday brought gifts to all of the fair damsels who had taken part in the Pageant Hoof Prints at Fort Myer. The gifts, or perhaps we should say mementoes, are very good-looking compacts, gold ones, containing the three necessary items, powder, lipstick and rouge and engraved with a little message to the future owner. Speaking of the pageant reminds us that, believe it or not, the society circus for next year, 1938, mind you, has already been written, all plans made, and only has to await the passing of time and the rehearsals to be the real thing.

Ran into Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Ecuadorian Ambassador, and her sister, Mme. de Sosa, shopping in one of the F street shops. Mme. Alfaro, who is planning to return to her homeland within a few weeks for a visit, was buying all sorts of attractive gadgets, jewelry, pins and objects d'art that will gladden the hearts of the recipients down in Ecuador.

We also heard that Olmedo, youngest of the Alfaros' three sons, is planning to enter West Point soon. That will make the fourth member of this popular family to go to our Military Academy, the envoy being the first, having graduated with the class of 1913, and his other two sons, Colon Eloy, jr., and Jaime, now are members of the yearling class.

There was the usual gay crowd at the Chevy Chase Club on Saturday evening. Flowered chiffons seemed to be making their first wholesale appearance, ushering in the summer season. Among those glimpsed at the club were Mrs. William T. Mann and Mrs. Smithers Brinkley, who were giving a party for the former's uncle, Mr. Smithers Brinkley, who has recently come to Washington from New York, and Miss Louise Alexander.

Longs Will Open Historic Manor At Laurel May 19

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long will open their historic home, Montpelier Manor, near Laurel, Md., May 19, under the auspices of the District of Columbia committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation for the benefit of Stratford.

This house, built before 1760 by Thomas Snowden, is surrounded by boxwood gardens and fine old trees. Montpelier has been from the first neither vacant nor neglected, which accounts for the preservation of its exquisitely carved cornices and mantels, and its virtually unchanged interior. What restoration has been necessary has been made in the light of painstaking research by Mrs. Long.

Architecturally it is a beautiful example of Maryland Georgian style—a central building with wings. It is distinctive for its two semi-octagonal wings, added by Maj. Thomas Snowden after his marriage to Ann Ridgely. Only in the Hammond House at Annapolis is there to be found in Maryland another example of these.

Mrs. Wilson Lee, who is chairman of the house opening, has as her committee Mrs. John W. Burke, Mrs. J. Harry Covington, Mrs. Henderson Dunn, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Harry L. Grant, Mrs. Louis S. Greene, Mrs. Walter B. Guy, Mrs. McCook Knox, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Lloyd P. Shippen, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor and Mrs. Benjamin Weems.

Mrs. Cazenove Lee is director of the Washington committee of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation and Mr. H. Rozier Dulany, jr., is the treasurer.

Mrs. Dougherty Opening Cedars

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty will leave tomorrow to spend the entire summer at a house in Westport, Conn., which she has been remodeling.

Mrs. Dougherty has spent the past few weeks getting curtains and material to cover furniture in the house. It is now all ready except for painting the walls of the library. The house is called the "Cedars," taking its name from the trees which surround it. Mrs. Dougherty expects to have several guests from Washington during the summer.

The Metropolitan Police Boys Club, which Mrs. Dougherty organized this year, will hold a luncheon meeting at the Willard tomorrow. The luncheon will be in preparation for its preliminary drive, in the course of which members hope to raise $75,000 to use for work on the clubhouse.

Mrs. S. M. H. Bateman To Marry Mr. Loeffler

Mrs. Sara Mae Henderson Bateman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Henderson, of New Bern, N. C., who for the past few years has been residing in Washington, will be married this morning to Mr. William G. Loeffler, formerly of St. Louis and Chicago, now fiscal egent of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The ceremony will take place at Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church in Alexandria, the Rev. O. W. Brittingham officiating.

After the ceremony the couple will leave for an extended trip. On their return they will reside in Washington. The bride attended Salem College in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Miss Ruth Yates William Clark Are Married

Rev. Latch Performs Ceremony at Arlington M. E. Church.

A wedding of much interest in Arlington County was that of Miss Ruth Yates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Yates, of South Wakefield street, Barcroft, and Mr. William M. Clark, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Clark, of Arlington, which took place Saturday evening in the Arlington M. E. Church with the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor of the Chevy Chase Methodist Church, officiating. He was assisted by the pastor of the Arlington church, the Rev. W. Clark Main.

The bride was escorted and given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin. The tulle veil was arranged about the face in a halo and trimmed with seed pearls and small clusters of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was Mrs. C. A. Bayliss, of Lyon Park, and Miss Jacqueline Foster was maid of honor. Mrs. Hugh Jones, Miss Virgie Huber and Mrs. Durwood Huffman were the bridesmaids.

Mr. Clark had as his best man his brother, Mr. Joseph Clark, while the ushers were Mr. John Wallace, Mr. Russell Chewing, Mr. G. A. Bayliss and Mr. Arthur Kirschner.

A reception followed in the home of the bride. Receiving with the young couple were Mr. and Mrs. Yates, Mrs. Ruby Clark and Mrs. W. T. Johnson.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Clark left by motor on their wedding trip, Mrs. Clark wearing a blue suit trimmed with gray and blue accessories. On their return they will make their home with the bride's parents until their new home is completed.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Haxel Errickson, Mr. Robert Klinge, Miss Rhodeson Duravant, aunt of the bride; Mr. Al Reynolds, all of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Carwell Miller and Mrs. Elsie Neidermeager, of Richmond.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Love Is Solid Reality, as Much of the Heart as of the Head, Says Happily Married Wife.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Having long been a devotee of your column and a champion of your intelligent and perceptive counsels, may I begin by rather apologizing for showing approbation by disapprobation? I assure you I would not lift a pen to disagree with you did I not think you well worth disagreeing with!

* * * *

You advised a young woman to cure herself of a morbid attraction for one young man by marrying another whom she was, it seemed to me, obviously not in love with. Because he was a bargain, as it were, and because her measuring stick of fictional love was the only one by which she judged the relationship, you discounted her doubts and set up for her, instead, another measuring stick for love which I believe to be almost as erroneous as the first.

Surely, Miss Haworth, love as a solid reality nevertheless has more of the heart in it then you describe, albeit as much of the head. It has its own emotional symptoms even though they aren't the overwhelmingly ecstatic ones found in fiction. And they are details that belong to the whole and thereby make it whole. The quiet certainty that you want to spend the rest of your life beside that one person is not an "ecstatic" emotion; it is a bond and a desire that is a fact which takes root in you for good. The girl you advised certainly lacked that necessity for marriage.

Love means a complete willingness to sacrifice, not because it is just "a rule of the game" but because the happiness and aspirations of the one you love are naturally worth more to you than any individual desire of your own. Only then can the realities of sacrifice in marriage be a part of the love from which it ought to spring. The young woman surely wanted that model young man for herself and an individual aim of hers; as an excellent medicine to cure herself, not to help him and be a part of him, but rather to help her and be a part of herself alone.

* * * *

Then, too, I certainly pity any woman who cannot realize the delightful reality of the affection which makes love, from day to day, fresh and endearing. One must love a person truly and without doubt to find secret and almost unconscious delight in all the countless things about him—his peculiarly low voice, the shape of his hands, the ways his hair grows in back, the too-often repeated gestures, his terrible singing in the bathtub.

* * * *

Life would be dull indeed with the most model of husbands if all the nuances of real love were relegated to the pages of fiction! Please, Miss Haworth, don't advise anyone to hazard such a dangerous experiment as marriage which obviously holds none of these things. They are the lifeblood and daily bread of love for a woman married to a man forever and through all. I agree with all you said, but nevertheless, feel there is much more to say—including the truth that woman must and does live by her heart as well as her head, story books or no story books.

* * * *

To briefly prove my authority to speak, may I add that I have been married for several years and was in love with my husband for four trying years before that. Several bargains in young men wanted to marry me but it was only after falling in love and understanding all that it means and holds that I realized what a selfish and boring life I might have let myself in for—no matter how good a wife I might have been or how devoted a husband any of them might have proved to be. The priceless ingredient would have been missing and it cannot be manufactured. Isn't it rather too dangerous to try? Especially on someone else? I adjure you to be careful, Miss Haworth.

CONSTANCE.

Clarifying a Point.

DEAR CONSTANCE: One cannot deny that there is no greater blessing husband and wife can know than the mutual possession of such love as you describe. But in a department of this kind, whose whole purpose is to aid the perplexed, despairing and denied in making the most and best of their lot through arriving at some realistic, tolerable solution of their tangled affairs, it seems at times impracticable to preach the philosophy of pure idealism. And I trust that I am not being cynical, but only realistic, in believing that not all successful marriages are made in heaven; that some, indeed, are achieved by intelligent adaptation of such worth-while material as comes to hand. And this was the point I perhaps did not make entirely clear in answering "Young Reader."

Tomorrow's Problems

1. Woman, 32, asks how to bring about second meeting with man she met years ago and can't forget. 2. School girl daughter of divorced parents, now 18, who sickens at thought of love-making, solicits counsel.

Tip for 'Midshipman.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: On May 4 you published a letter signed "Midshipman." Since I know midshipmen fairly well I think I can answer him. He claims girls don't take him seriously. If he is serious about girls I think he is the only fellow in the United States Naval Academy who is. I'm a young girl who took several midshipmen seriously only to get some heartaches in return.

* * * *

Most of us who are "Navy drags" have found it never pays to take a midshipman seriously. As soon as we begin to show too much interest in him he always gets scared and drops us as fast as he can. Since girls have met treatment like that, can you blame them for not taking midshipmen seriously?

* * * *

I must say the midshipman who wrote you certainly seems to be above the average—though he may be short in stature. He seems to be suffering from the generally known reputation of "middies." At any rate, he need not give up hope for when the right girl comes along she'll take him seriously. That ought to be enough to satisfy any boy. Sincerely.

DISILLUSIONED NAVY DRAG.

DEAR D. N. D.: Thank you for your letter. It ought to put "Midshipman" right on a lot of things he's failed to understand about those girls who insist on treating him like a brother. At least, it may prevent his making the mistake of adopting a debonair attitude toward "Navy drags" in general. You two ought to meet. You'd be a great help to each other.

M. H.

Corn-Meal Shampoo.

Gloria Dickson, movie actress, who maintains blonde hair needs more care than brunette, swears by a certain quick dry shampoo that any girl can give herself in an emergency. She rubs corn meal into her hair, then brushes it out with quick strong strokes. It takes out all the excess oil but leaves the hair soft and glossy.

Twin Angora Kittens Make Cute Subject for Wall Panel

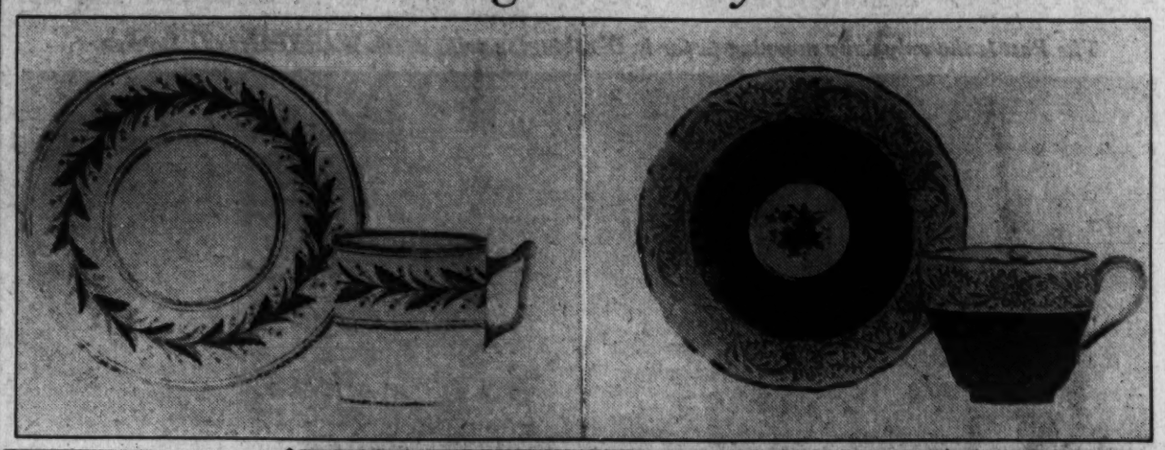
The Coronation Brings New Styles in Chinaware



Dinner Tables Will Reflect Royal Pageant

By Rebekah Blake.

INFLUENCE of the British coronation probably will be felt about the American dinner table for generations to come. Long after gorgeous dresses and hats inspired by the coronation ceremonies have become threadbare and forgotten Americans will be eating from plates and drinking from cups that were designed and made in celebration of the crowning of George VI.

The famous Spode factories in Staffordshire, England, are working overtime producing china that will be purchased by coronation visitors and taken home as souvenirs. Since china represents probably the most practical of coronation gifts, the new designs are expected to have a wide circulation and to influence china styles for years to come.

These china styles also will be offered in American stores and the stay-at-homes who miss the coronation will still be able to have the satisfaction of eating off coronation plates.

Popularity of the new coronation styles has been enhanced by the fact that members of the royal family and the British nobility have been purchasing new china designs for coronation entertaining. Queen Elizabeth has purchased a new dinner service which bears one of the characteristic Spode designs, a bird vaunting its plumage. The Queen has also purchased a coffee service with a simple floral wreath design and the Duchess of Gloucester has bought a coffee service in a more colorful Persian floral effect.

The Spode factories founded by Josiah Spode, famous potter, in 1799, have long supplied china for the royalty and nobility of not only England but all of Europe. Among their patrons have been Queen Victoria and Katherine of Russia.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Chronic Constipation.

Theoretically constipation is due to lack of sufficient residue in the food, and when a diet is prescribed giving a large food residue, constipation will be corrected. Practically this is true in some cases, but as every person with chronic constipation knows, the intestines which are fundamentally sluggish are difficult to activate, no matter how much residue there is in the food.

A study has been made and recently reported of the effect of all sorts of food upon constipation.

Let us begin with water: Water unquestionably favors transmission of food from the stomach to the large intestine, but the large intestine absorbs a good deal of water, and apparently excessive water has no effect in increasing the movements of this part of the bowel. Inasmuch as this is the real seat of constipation, water does not have any influence on the condition. A number of patients who were normal as to their digestive tracts were given a glass of water every hour for 14 or 15 hours daily—almost a gallon a day. There was no increase in bowel movements, merely activation of the kidneys. Too little water, on the other hand, results in a dry stool with constipation.

No typical food contains water sufficient for the body to use that food and dispose of the end products. Even milk has a deficit of 40 c.c. of water per 100 calories. Thus plenty of water is necessary aside from food.

Foods may affect the intestine in various ways. First, by distention—by the total bulk; second, by mechanical irritation — roughage, such as bran, skin, seeds, etc.; third, by chemical irritation—by sugars, oil, spices, by laxative acids of fruits; fourth, by the influence of vitamins, especially vitamin B.

Fruits are of all classes of foods probably the ones which are most likely to overcome constipation. They furnish roughage in their fiber, and in addition they may be laxative through their cathartic acids and salts. For instance, lemons, oranges and grapefruit contain potassium citrate and free citric acid which becomes sodium citrate in the duodenum; grapes contains potassium bitartrate which becomes Rochelle salt; apples contain malates and citrates. Thus, as one research worker says, "The eater of an orange, a grapefruit, grapes, raisins or an apple actually takes a small dose of salts."

Tomorrow we will consider the subject of roughage.

Melt ¾ tablespoon butter in ring mold, let run around the mold to grease it thoroughly and pour extra butter into the mixture. Fill mold with carrot, set in pan of hot water and bake at 325 F. until firm. turn out on chop plate and cover with mushroom sauce.

Cream in Bath.

An oily complexion cream allowed to remain on the face during the bath is excellent for dry skins, suggests Helen Broderick, comedienne. The heat aids the treatment as it does in a hot-oil shampoo.

Smart Attire May Be Ruined By Accessories

YOUR accessories will make or break your summer wardrobe, warns Madge Evans, movie actress. In a season when accessories are such an important part of the ensemble Miss Evans gives the following suggestions:

More smart costumes have been ruined by an unwise choice of bags, shoes and jewelry than by any other method. Bags and shoes are not difficult to choose. One should look for that illusive something referred to as "line," in selection of these items, as carefully as one does in the selection of a dress. There are good lines and bad lines, in both shoes and bags. A graceful, well-made appearance is necessary in both.

Jewelry is quite another matter. First of all, jewelry should never be worn simply because one happens to notice the item in a case and to decide to snap it on. It should, instead, be worn to bring out definitely some point of the gown. For example, a lovely neckline may be emphasized by a clip, designed to carry out the original line. A plain neckline may be given a touch of ornamentation by the addition of a simple, but beautifully designed necklace, by a pin or a clip.

Never forget that both bracelets and rings call attention to the hands. If they are lovely, by all means wear them, providing, of course the gown calls for such an addition.

For this summer, try wearing beige instead of white, It is extremely smart and offers a welcome variation.

But, if you must have white, here's a tip. Buy three pair of washable gloves, rather than one pair of kid or leather. They are easy to launder, and they always look fresh. Remember that nothing is more discouraging on a nice summer day than tired-looking white, regardless of whether it is in gloves, shoes, bags—or a dress.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 9.

THERE will be other music than the buzz of the skeeter and the sharp bark of the motor horn heard in the rocky hills of nearby Connecticut this summer. A large colony of untreed larks, or New York musicmakers, has grown up around the fine old town of Ridgefield, and thanks to the generosity of Mr. William Matheus Sullivan, patron of the arts, they are soon to have their own small opera house. It will seat 400 of the landed gentry of those parts, and I suppose the tenants and peasantry in general can sit on the lawn outside.

ALICE HUGHES.

Weird place, that once quiet countryside. The musicians have flooded it of recent years. The retired Geraldine Farrar is a citizen, and so are Lily Pons, Mario Chamlee, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett and Marion Telva. These and other choice spirits will be invited to Mr. Sullivan's opera in time, where only the works of the sainted Mozart will be performed, according to early reports. Eddy Brown will conduct the band.

Even earlier settlers of the district were the writers, painters and sculptors who took root in the territory around Westport and Silvermine. Such turbulent journalistic spirits as Heywood Broun and Westbrook Pegler are citizens of the region, and other folk of both sexes scribble, sculp and sub all day and far into the night. Anybody who doesn't "do" something might as well keep away. Precious few Philistines live in that neck of the wood, save a few hewers of wood and drawers of water for "de big folks on de hill."

Now adjacent Connecticut will have its proper social "tone," with the addition of its Mozart Opera House, and its guests can sniff, if they choose, at the poor writers and such, pot-boiling away at their trivial tasks.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Loretta Young, never looking prettier in all her born days, spent a few frantic days among us on her way to a holiday in Bermuda. I went to the usual cocktail-grab and canapesnatch staged in her honor by the company for which she lathers herself on the lot. Highlights of her get-up were a sable cape and a veiled pill-box hat. I've always felt just a bit sorry for this girl, somehow. Think of it—in pictures at 13, married to Grant Withers at 18, divorced at 19—nothing in all her young life but pictures and picture people. She told me what I hadn't known, that in addition to Polly Ann and Sally there's a fourth Young girl, Georgianna, now 12. Any price you name that the youngster goes into films, too.

Our whole world of the theater was saddened by the death of William Gillette at 81. Only a name to the kids, our parents remember him as one of the great romantic heroes of their day, in "Secret Service" and "Sherlock Holmes." And he it was, over 20 years ago, who led out a wonderful mite to take her first bow. Her name was, and for that matter is, Helen Hayes.

Local ladies were thrown into a colossal dither by the surprise marriage of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, beau ideal of a fighting soldier in our time, to Miss Faircloth, of Nashville. No one here knew a thing about the romance. When he was still in his thirties, the dashing Mac commanded the Rainbow Division in the World War, and now has so many medal ribbons that there are enough for two tunics!

My favorite dresser of the week has been Mrs. Tommy Hitchcock, jr., wife of the world-famed poloist, whom I saw aboard upon the highway wearing a beautiful cape costume of light grey twill, topped by a tiny white pique pillbox. The cape thing is probably the spring's outstanding costume, in the matter of daytime duddage. And really, it's hard to top a cape for smartness!

Jeanette MacDonald Sporting Novel Gown

Quite the most stunning dinner gown ever to be included in a trousseau is the model chosen by Jeanette MacDonald, movie actress. Created of dream blue souffle, the dress itself is long and fashioned after strict Empire lines, with back fullness starting at the high waist and continuing downward to form a train.

The frock is set off by a bolero jacket of matching fabric, trimmed with a glistening array of hand-beaded blue ball fringe. Epaulets of the same beads hang off the shoulder and drape down over the upper arm.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Job Hunter.

"Mr. Jenks? . . . I'm Doris Ivey. I wonder if I . . . Oh, but I DID see the young lady at the desk—that is, yesterday—and she said you were too busy——

"Yes, I know; she said there were no openings, but I just thought maybe . . . well, if I could only have two seconds of your time . . . you see, it's really not about a job; it's just that I want a little advice . . . yes, I know you're terribly busy, Mr. Jenks; say, by the way, you really are THE Mr. Jenks, aren't you. I mean THE Mr. Jenks of the Jenks Noodle Co.?

". . . Oh, nothing; it was only that you seemed so terribly young to be the head of such a TREMENDOUS concern. You must have started at an awfully early age! My, it's so inspiring to meet someone who's made such a wonderful success.

". . . Oh, no; really, I mean every word of it. I think you're doing such a MARVELOUS piece of work here. Something so constructive. You know, I've always said there were only two companies in the United States I'd want to work for—one was United States Steel and the other the Jenks Noodle Co. They both do things in such a BIG way.

". . . Oh, yes, I'll be glad to leave my name and address . . . Yes, I know exactly how it is—everybody's retrenching. But I thought if you'd only keep me in mind.

"Well, no, I can't say that I've ever had what you'd call REAL office experience. But I've led a very broad life . . . and I've got a lot of good contacts. You know, this is the way I feel about it. I'd do ANYTHING—empty wastebaskets, scrub floors—just to learn the business, just to be able to say I'd worked for the Jenks Noodle Co. It would mean so much prestige.

". . . Oh, that's awfully sweet of you! . . . You'll really keep me in mind? . . . When shall I come in again? . . . In a month? . . . That'll be fine. I've got a lot of things I want to do around home, anyway. You know, at heart I'm terribly domestic. I simply ADORE puttering around with pots and pans!

". . . Oh, yes, I agree with you perfectly. I really think every woman would be a lot better off at home, but of course, in my case, after the family lost their money—well, it just came to the point where somebody had to do SOMETHING. And then, of course, I really think it broadens a woman to get out in the business world an meet really big men who are doing big things. Women get so narrow, just seeing each other—and the kind of men they meet at cocktail parties.

". . . Oh, I admit that IS true. . . . I suppose about 99 per cent of women ARE unfitted for the business world—that is, when it comes to the executive positions and the really BIG jobs . . . Yes, I know they're terribly emotional and disorganized. They look at everything too personally . . . But still, Mr. Jenks, don't you think they're pretty good on detail? . . .

"Now, this is the way I look at it, Mr. Jenks: I know I'm terribly dumb and don't know anything about the business world, but it seems to me that if women in offices could be used for the routine and let the men do the thinking—that is, the REAL thinking—everybody would be better off. That's just why I'd be willing to take almost any kind of a little job.

". . . What! . . . Oh, that's perfectly wonderful of you, Mr. Jenks . . . you mean you'll REALLY look around and try to find something for me? . . . Oh, I think it would be simply fascinating—I mean so terribly INTERESTING to work around here. Now, when shall I drop in again?

"In a week! . . . How wonderful! . . . You know, Mr. Jenks, you just can't realize what it's meant to me, having this little talk with you . . . it's just as if I'd been up on a mountain . . . Oh, I really mean it, Mr. Jenks! You know, this is the first time I've ever talked to a really BIG man—I mean who was doing things. You know, Mr. Jenks, I really want to do things in the world. I mean BIG things . . . I mean. . . . what I really mean is I really want to be BIG like you. That's why I'm so crazy to work for the Jenks Noodle Co.

". . . No, I haven't anything particular in mind—it's just that I want to do something worth while. I'm terribly dumb, I know, but there's one thing about me—I WILL work. That is, if I have somebody to lead me, to inspire me, somebody to grow up to.

* * * *

"What? . . . Why, Mr. Jenks! You don't mean it! . . . You don't mean you're going to give me a chance! . . . Why I can hardly believe it . . . What? . . . Tomorrow? . . . of course I can come tomorrow. I'll be right here at 8 o'clock.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Bob Marshall Promoted

Robert Marshall, who some years ago paled on civilization of the current sort and hied away for some 15 months to the Arctic's rim to investigate the reasons for the general contentment of the pople up there, has received a well-deserved promotion . . . At hand is an announcement of his appointment as chief of the Division of Recreation in Forest Service, Agriculture Department.

During the past four years, Dr. Marshall was chief forester in the Indian Service, Department of the Interior . . . In his new post, he will have charge of development of recreational facilities and the handling of public recreation use in the 156 national forests . . .

A Government press release points out that more than 23,000,000 persons visited the national forests in recreational pursuits last year, not including millions of incidental and transient visitors . . . This, it was explained, creates a heavy pressure for the development of recreational facilities to take care of constantly increasing numbers of visitors . . . More than 6,000 campgrounds already have been improved for the public use.

* * * *

And this is all very interesting, but not so interesting as the personality of Bob Marshall . . . You will recall him as the author of "Arctic Village," a book that appeared several years ago and which the toughest bitten of the critics were loudly praiseful of . . . Having read his book and learned from someone or another that he was employed by the Government, we went over to see him one afternoon and the ensuing chat afforded what we consider a lively column on a day when Government news was scarce . . .

The man is loaded with good stories, but he won't unload them on you . . . We don't know what it takes to make Bob Marshall talk; but in the little that he does tell there flashes his fine talent for story telling and his fine background . . .

But the stories, as said before, are drawn from him with difficulty . . . Only on one subject does he talk freely, entirely without restraint: That is on the subject of American forests . . . He goes quietly mad on that subject, but being himself, he leaves himself out of the picture of forest preservation . . . His friends will tell you that he has done a lot toward that work . . . They predict that he will do more . . .

Curiously enough—for one who loves the out-of-doors with such intensity—he was born in New York City . . . There he received his early schooling and later attended Columbia College, the New York State College of Forestry and did graduate work at the Harvard Forest School . . . In 1930, he received his doctorate from Johns Hopkins University in the study of plant physiology . . .

He was employed by the New York State Conservation Commission in 1923 and entered the Forest Service of the United States as a field assistant in 1924 . . . In the following year, he was appointed junior forester at the Northern Rocky Mountain Experiment Station, where he later was promoted to assistant silviculturist . . .

* * * *

Then, on a leave of absence from the service, he went to Alaska to devote special study to the growth rate of forests . . . Also, he went up there to find out why the people were so contented . . . It was this impulse that best pictures Bob Marshall . . . Something, as we said of him once before, is "always lost behing the ranges" and tugging at his coat tails by day and singing at his sleep . . . Back from the Arctic Rim, he undoubtedly had a lot of facts and figures about the forests up there . . . And he also had the materials that went into "Arctic Village" . . . He would have—being Bob Marshall . . .

* * * *

Now at promotion time, Chief Forester Silcox says of him: "Dr. Marshall has made notable contributions in the field of forestry in this country, especially in the development of forest recreation policy in its relation to our national conservation program. His accomplishments as a forester, his wide knowledge in the field of forest recreation and his enthusiasm for the preservation of wilderness lands will be distinct assets in conducting the recreation work of the Forest Service."

'Cat' Suspect Tonight Enters Police Line-up

Many residents of Chevy Chase and Cleveland Park will visit Police Headquarters tonight to view a man suspected of being "the Cat," an almost legendary burglar whose second-story work stands second to none in District crime history.

Led by the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, the 1927 victims of "the Cat" will test their memories in an effort to identify from an assortment of prisoners at Headquarters a man arrested in Alexandria Saturday as the "feline" burglar suspect.

"The Cat" earned his name through his unusual agility as a porch-climber. "The Cat" apparently retired in 1928 and was heard from no more, after a series of burglaries.

Word reached Alexandria police recently that a man was selling jewelry to railroad yard workers. They arrested a suspect. The man was noncommittal about himself, and he was turned over to Washington police.

However, a number of burglaries have been committed in the Eighth Precinct here, some in Arlington County, and some in Alexandria, in which a technique similar to that of "the Cat" was used.

Identification of the prisoner will be difficult, it was admitted, because nobody got a good look at "the Cat" when he was in his heydey, and that was ten years ago. The Rev. Holister is one of the few who spied "the Cat" at work. He discovered him in a bedroom the night of Nov. 18, 1927, and will be the ace witness.

Police spent yesterday digging out names of 1927 victims from the files. Many have moved from the city, others were not sure of what the "Cat" looked like.

Annapolis Hero Statue Garbed in Feminine Apparel

Annapolis, Md., May 9 (AP).—The war-like bronze figure of Baron Johann DeKalb on the State House grounds, appeared today clad in a dainty pink and white tea apron, apparently placed on the mounment during the night by some prankster.

Patriotic-minded persons frowned disapproval when they saw the beruffled piece of feminine apparel fluttering around the legs of the august figure of the Revolutionary soldier and patriot. Others were inclined to smile.

D.C. Report to Urge King Bill Approval

At the hearing tomorrow on the King bill designed to keep "nuisance industries" out of Washington, the District Commissioners will be prepared to present a report arguing that such a bill is necessary to protect development of Washington as the Nation's Capital.

Further, Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, will be prepared to show the bill is unquestionably valid.

The bill, introduced the same day the Adolf Gobel Co. received a permit for a slaughterhouse at Benning, might, if passed, militate against the company's operations.

In addition to the Commissioners and many District of Columbia citizens, Secretary of Interior Ickes and Howard Gray, of the PWA's Housing Division, will vigorously oppose the Benning slaughterhouse.

50 Felled by Heat as 10,000 Attend Mass at Frederick

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., May 9.—In a blazing sun that prostrated 50 of their number, 10,000 Catholics massed here this morning for a demonstration climaxing a three-day convention of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade.

Crusade delegates and friends representing parochial school and college students from Washington, Baltimore and southern and western Maryland were at attention while the Most Rev. Amlito Giovanni Cicognani, Papal delegate to the United States, sang the solemn high military field mass. The religious ceremony followed a parade in which more than 5,000 delegates marched.

The 90-degree heat of a brilliant May sun became a serious problem before the demonstration ended. First aid stations around the field were crowded with heat victims brought in by members of the Frederick Fire Department Corps. Nurses from St. John's Hospital in Frederick were called to emergency service to treat the patients.

Attacks Commission. E

The thousands who withstood the sun heard Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati, who preached, turn a no less-heated attack on communism and large corporations as "usurpers of the family freedom of American homes."

"Communism and mass production government education," he declared, "are making true family life impossible. Thank God, for American freedom, but communism and national movements of organizations are killing this freedom."

The archbishop charged corporations and monopolies with controlling the destiny of groups and localities.

Crowds Line Curb.

Headed by the St. Mary's Industrial School Band, Baltimore, and Company A, First Maryland Infantry, the parade began on Market street at 10:30 a. m. It extended down the main street to the Municipal Field. Large crowds lined the curb to watch the marchers.

Second division—Capt. Louis J. Bottemer and aides, western Maryland students.

Third division—Maj. Franz E. Rasmers and units from Mount St. Ages High School, Mount Washington, Md.; Institute of Notre Dame, Baltimore; Mount De Sales School, Catonsville, Md.; Seton High School, Baltimore.

The parade took more than an hour to pass the reviewing stand, which contained high church dignitaries. The papal delegate, Bishop Pierre Falaise, of Mackenzie, Canada, and Archbishop McNicholas, all clad in scarlet robes, sat in the open stand under the blazing sun. The colors for each unit, as well as the flags of the different military units, were grouped around the elevated altar.

Two choirs, made up of religious orders from Catholic University, sang the responses which drifted over the huge arena through a loud-speaking system.

At the consecration, when Msgr. Cicognani raised the sacred host aloft, the field was hushed. On their knees in the soggy field, the 10,000 witnesses worshiped.

The clear, faint notes of taps drifted over the kneeling throng. Drums rolled as the Catholics and Protestants-curious bowed their heads in reverence.

Convention Ends Tonight.

The convention will continue until tomorrow night. It is the second annual Archdiocesan demonstration staged by the Crusaders.

The Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, director of the District and Maryland units, was in charge of arrangements.

Tomorrow evening a dinner in honor of Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, will be given in the Francis Scott Key Hotel. Justice Butler will be chairman of the finals in the archdiocesan oratorical contest Monday night.

Mother's Day Is Celebrated With Services

A Gold Star mother stood in the sunlight of Arlington Amphitheater yesterday afternoon, and, reading a message from President Roosevelt, led the Nation in its observance of Mother's Day.

"The sacrifices which these valiant mothers (the war mothers) made is another incentive to all of us to consecrate anew all that we have to the cause of peace," the President wrote.

To that end—the end of peace—Mrs. Howard C. Boone, national president of the American War Mothers, and hundreds of other mothers, of her own and other patriotic organizations, dedicated the day, which a grateful America has dedicated to them.

Not far from the dais on which the white-haired mother stood—and within the shadow of the stars and stripes floating over the consecrated grounds, rested the Unknown Soldier, the son of an unknown mother. Their sacrifice, symbolized by the marble tomb at Arlington was not forgotten at yesterday's service.

Recognition of His Sacrifice.

"Today, again we lay our wreaths upon the tomb of this sleeping boy, in love and recognition of his full measure of sacrifice," said Mrs. Boone, recalling that the rites in which all were then participating were but a continuation of a tradition inaugurated by the War Mothers in 1925.

The mothers, many of whom lost sons in America's last war, placed their memorial wreaths by the Tomb. After ceremonies in the amphitheater, more than 35 of them, representing patriotic societies and chapters in almost every Eastern State, walked down a lane, through a military guard of honor to pay homage, with their flowers, to the war dead.

In addition to Mrs. Boone, the audience heard Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, who declared in an address that the kind of service rendered by American motherhood should stand as a keynote to the character of our country.

"Would that we had more of the spirit of mothers," he said.

Millard Rice Presides.

Millard W. Rice, legislative representative of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, presided. Capt. Edward A. Duff, U. S. Navy chaplain, gave the invocation, and the Rev. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, pronounced the benediction.

In Washington, Mothers' Day was observed in dozens of church services and special occasions.

Policemen and firemen observed the day with special religious services. Members of the Policemen and Firemen's Catholic Society attended mass at St. Patrick's Church early in the morning, and then proceeded to the Willard Hotel for a community breakfast.

The Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore, celebrated the mass. At the breakfast tributes to mothers were paid by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police. Attending were Representative Matthew J. Merritt, of New York; Judge Edward M. Curran, Judge Isaac R. Hitt and Judge Walter J. Casey, of the District Police Court, and prominent officers of both the police force and the fire staff. Fireman Harry S. Bell, president of the association, was master of ceremonies.

Last night the Rev. Hirl A. Kester, who is Protestant chaplain, conducted special Mothers' Day services for policemen and firemen at his church, Congress Street M. P. Church in Georgetown.

A real six-shooter of Civil War vintage, known as a "pepper box," was disclosed yesterday in the possession of a Washington boy. It has been ten years since Joseph Milton Dunn, 17, of 3721 Van Ness street northwest, discovered the pistol in a wooded part of Woodridge but not until yesterday was his find revealed. He is pictured with the gun. The weapon probably belonged to a Union soldier stationed at one of the forts which formerly stood near the spot where it was found, from information obtained by Joseph's mother, Mrs. Celestia Dunn.

Spider Webs Aid Scientists; Sun Gazers Off for Island

Tiny Threads Across Lens of Telescopes Will Register Total Eclipse June 8 on Lonely Pacific Atoll.

The spider thinks he's accomplished quite a trick if he spins a web that will catch him a good meal. But if he only knew his potentialities he'd be capturing heavenly bodies instead of flies.

The scientists of the National Geographic Society and the U. S. Navy do know better, and as they sail toward a mid-Pacific desert isle to observe the sun's total eclipse on June 8, they have a good supply of spider webs stored safely away in their scientific cargo.

Spider webs, the National Geographic explained yesterday, are one of those things modern sun scientists just don't do without. The use to which they put them, of course, is far removed from the commissary purposes of the carnivorous spider.

Webs, or rather the threads from them, are threads stretched across the front of eyepieces of some telescopes as an aid in measuring the diameter of planets and for noting the exact time that a star passes a point in the heavens. This is important in establishing time calculations.

These threads, it was pointed out, are among the most delicate parts in any instrument. They are just 15/100,000ths of an inch thick, and a pound of the stuff would contain a strand 25,000 miles long—the length of the earth's equator.

Scientists prefer spider threads for their telescopes because they are uniform in thickness and elastic enough to stay taut with changes in temperature. So the men don't take chances—they carry "spare webbing" along just in case a thread breaks.

Actual webs aren't taken, but tiny spider cocoons, which are composed of the same kind of threads that a spider uses in spinning a web, are used.

Ice boxes won't be used for refreshment purposes, although the scientists plan to spend more than a month in the tropics. While the expedition swelters, the refrigerators will be packed with photographic plates and films. Photographic emulsions, consisting largely of gelatin, deteriorate fast in the heat and humidity of the tropics.

A shotgun is going along, not to be used against hostile natives (the National Geographic says there aren't any) but for rats.

Paradoxically enough, one of the first duties of the expedition after going ashore on its island will be to "find out where it is." The exact latitude and longitude of the Phoenix Islands is uncertain, although, of course, their general location is known.

Observations of the eclipse would be worth little unless the exact point from which they were made were fixed. So John E. Willis, Naval Observatory scientist, will locate the island with the aid of the starts and a sextant and horizon.

Seal Pushing MinimumPay Salary Set-up

Counsel Declares Board to Be Named Needs Compensation.

A further development in the plan to begin enforcement of Washington's minimum wage law by July 1 arose last night when Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, declared he believes the not-yet-appointed enforcement board should receive compensation.

The board which functioned under the old law, recently declared constitutional by the Supreme Court, consisted of three non-paid members.

Salary Recommendation.

In speaking for a paid board, Seal said, "There will be much work to do, and we can hardly expect people to work with no remuneration." He recommended board members be paid on a per diem basis.

Other plans for enforcement of the wage law, as announced Saturday by Seal, are:

1. A request that Congress include in the present pending appropriations bill funds for the board's expenses.
2. A six-month working test of the old law, before consideration, at the next session of Congress of changes.
3. A study of the possibility of a minimum wage law for men.

Opening Wedge.

Formation of the plan, which Seal will soon place before the Commissioners, is the first action to be taken on the wage law since President Roosevelt requested, more than a month ago, postponement of appointment of the enforcement board. The President's request came, he said at the time, because he wanted to study the possibility of including men within the scope of the law, now confined to women and minors.

Meanwhile, whether the minimum wage law has actually been resurrected by the Supreme Court decision, will soon be tested in Municipal Court.

Waitress' Suit.

About one month ago, Ruth Cornett, red-haired waitress, brought suit to recover, under provisions of the old law, back wages from the proprietor of a local restaurant.

The weight of legal opinion, supported by Attorney Homer S. Cummings and Seal, indicates the wage law has reappeared on the statute books. Should, however, Mrs. Cornett lose her case in Municipal Court it is believed that Congress must pass a new District minimum wage law.

Cards' Star Leads Loop; Bucs Win, 6-3

Dean Has Yielded 3 Runs, 38 Hits, Fanned 40 So Far.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 9.—Dizzy Dean kept right on top as the best pitcher of the season today by winning his fifth straight victory, a 7-to-1 decision over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Before nearly 30,000 fans who packed Ebbets Field, Dizzy the Great handcuffed the Brooklyns with nine hits, fanned seven, and, in allowing but one earned run, kept his season average at .500, far and away the outstanding record in the big leagues.

Max Butcher, Brooklyn starter, held the gashouse gang scoreless until Don Gutteridge's double and Frenchy Bordagaray's single brought in the first run in the fifth. An error by Cookie Lavagetto gave the Cards an unearned tally in the sixth. In the eighth they knocked Ralph Birkofer out of the box with a pair of runs, and in the ninth belted Lefty Clark for three more.

But for a bit of tough luck in the ninth frame, Dizzy would have pitched his third shutout of the year. Johnny Hudson lined a long smash to right, which should have been an out for Pepper Martin, but he fell while running after it and it rolled to the fence for a two-bagger. Pinch Hitter Morgan followed immediately with another double for the Dodgers' only run.

Thirty-eight hits.
Forty strikeouts.

Brandt Checks Bees As Pirates Win, 6 to 3

Boston, May 9 (AP).—Ed Brandt, Pittsburgh southpaw ace, kept eight Boston Bees' hits scattered except in one inning today as his mates pounced on three Bees hurlers for seven hits and a 6-to-3 victory.

The league-leading Pirates took a 4-to-3 lead in the fifth inning when Bill Weir, Boston rookie, lost his control and walked three men, and All Todd, Pirate backstop, rapped out a two-run single.

Guy Bush pitched effectively through the seventh inning, when he was removed for a pinch hitter and Bob Smith took over the mound.

Gallagher's Opponent Sharpens Knockout Wallop

JORGE BRESCIA, of the Argentine, takes a few pokes at the light bag as he tunes up for tonight's bout at Turner's Arena against Marty Gallagher which many believe will spell the finish of the local heavyweight's ring career.

By Bill McCormick.

William Martin Gallagher, the perennial heavyweight contender from Foggy Bottom, may play the part of the pitcher (and catcher) who went to the well once too often when he faces hard-hitting Jorge Brescia, from the Argentine, at Turner's Arena tonight.

Considered one of the best big prospects of the year before he collided with Joe Louis at a time when he had no business being in the same ring with the Brown Bomber, Brescia is ready to take up his quest of the heavyweight championship where he left off at the persuasion of Louis.

Brescia's hitting power is attested by a string of knockouts over opponents of his own experience and the fact that he twice almost dropped Louis before the Detroit Negro was able to get over the sleep-producer which finally dropped Jorge for the 10-count.

Had 50 Amateur Bouts.

Before coming to this country, Brescia had some 50 fights as an amateur. He was brought here by Louis Soresi, who is largely responsible for inflicting Primo Carnera on the American public. Soresi rescued Jorge from the amateur ranks just as the Argentinean government was preparing him as a representative in the 1936 Olympics.

In his first fight in this country, Brescia stopped Andy Wallace in two rounds. In rapid succession he stopped John Emery, Paul Pross and Jim Merriott and won a decision from Hans Kolhaas.

Last year Jorge won from Frankie Connelly and Abe Feldman, stopped George Nicholson and was stopped by Joe Louis. The Argentinean

In addition to Hagen, six members of the team already have been chosen and a squad of 13 leading professionals has been named to compete for the four open places.

Nats Win, 7-1, As DeShong Gives 4 Hits

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, May 9.—Jimmy DeShong delivered unto the Nats a four-hit pitching performance this afternoon and provided the inspiration for a 7-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

Washington won the game by the simple procedure of scoring a couple of runs every so often against the pitching of a pair of pitching ancients Manager Rogers Hornsby sent to the mound—Elon Hogsett and Sheriff Blake.

DeShong was pretty good. The only run he yielded was partly of his own making—eventuating as it did from the base on balls to Beau Bell and a two-bagger off the bat of Rogers Hornsby in the second inning.

He had something on his fast ball besides the stitches. It was jumping eccentrically and dipping away from the Browns' bats all afternoon. He dealt off a succession of zeros to the Browns in those last seven innings and protected the various leads the Nats gave him as if they were something sacred.

Stone Clears Bags.

St. Louis to the number of 5,996 watched with dismay as the Nats pummeled the left-handed Hogsett and the right-handed Blake for ten hits with Buddy Myer, Johnny Stone, Ossie Bluege and Ben Chapman each collecting a pair, but their last hit of the game was the most damaging.

That was contributed by Johnny Stone in the ninth inning when Blake, a 37-year-old American League rookie who had served ten years with the Cubs, happened to be on the mound and the bases happened to be full of Nats. Stone's contribution happened to be a three-bagger over Centerfielder Ethan Allen's head and, very naturally, sent three colleagues clattering across the plate.

The Nats didn't tarry with the ancient Mr. Hogsett. Ben Chapman opened the firing in the first inning with a single into centerfield and Buddy Lewis waited successfully for a walk. With one out Stone lashed a single into rightfield to score Chapman and put Lewis on third and at this point Al Simmons scord Lewis with a fly into leftfield to put the Washingtons ahead, 2-0.

At It Again.

DeShong's lone lapse of the game enabled the Browns to cut this lead in half in the second inning, but in the fourth the Nats scored as many hits as the Browns were able to accumulate off DeShong all day, and add a couple of runs.

Al Simmons launched the fourth-inning proceedings with a hot single into center and Buddy Myer perpetuated the rally with a hotter double against the right centerfield screen only a foot shy of a home run.

Ossie Bluege pounded a single into center to score both Simmons and Myer and Walter Milles provided the fourth straight hit—another single into center—but Bluege over-es-

Bonura's Homer, Lee's Hurling Beat Yanks, 2-1

25,000 Fans See Champions Handed Their 4th Straight Defeat as Chicagoan Allows But 4 Hits; Chandler, Yankee Rookie, Gives Only 5.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 9.—Zeke Bonura's big bat and Thornton Lee's smart southpaw pitching gave the Chicago White Sox a 2-to-1 decision over the New York Yankees before 25,000 chilled spectators today, accounting for the world champions' fourth straight defeat.

Bonura, whose homer with two on yesterday beat the Boston Red Sox, blasted one of Spurgeon Chandler's pitches into the stands in the seventh inning to break a 1-all deadlock and give the Sox victory. Lee, pitching his first complete game of the campaign, held the famous Yankee sluggers to four hits, while Chandler, 27-year-old recruit obtained from Newark, gave only five blows.

The Sox scored in the first inning when Hank Steinbacher was safe on Tony Lazzeri's wide throw and continued around on Larry Rosenthal's infield hit, Dixie Walker's sacrifice and a long fly by Bonura. The Yanks tied it in the seventh, also with an unearned run. Red Rolfe scratched an infield single, went to second when Steinbacher dropped Joe DiMaggio's fly, but was out at third, and Lou Gehrig, attempting to sacrifice, was doubled at first after arguing that the ball was foul. DiMaggio went to second on the play and scored on Bill Dickey's double.

Macks Rally, Shade Tigers, 9-8, Share Lead

Detroit, May 9 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics overcame a six-run lead today, defeated the Detroit Tigers, 9 to 8, and jumped into a tie with Cleveland for the American League lead.

A big seventh inning in which the Athletics scored six runs and drove Elden Auker from the mound set the stage for their victory.

The relief pitching of Lynn Nelson, who relieved Almon Williams in the fifth with none out, contributed greatly. Nelson allowed but three hits and fanned four. He was the winning pitcher.

Hudlin Surprises in Beating Red Sox, 3-1

Cleveland, May 9 (AP).—Willis Hudlin, veteran right-hand pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, who waited until the next to last day of the 1936 season to pitch his only victory last summer, today hurled a four-hit triumph over the Boston Red Sox with a score of 3 to 1.

Selection of Hudlin as the starting pitcher was forced upon Manager Steve O'Neill when Mel Harder, originally slated for mound duty, reported with a slight case of flu, which may keep him out several days.

The return of his former skill today was a surprise to Cleveland fans. He was master of the Sox with the exception of the fourth inning when Boston bunched two of their four hits, a single by Manager Joe Cronin, and a triple by "Pinky" Higgins, for their lone run.

Cleveland tied the score in their half of the fourth on a double by Earl Averill, who advanced to third on Trosky's infield out, and tallied on Solter's fly to Cramer.

Frankie Pytlak singled in the fifth, stole second, and scored the winning run on a double by Lyn Lary. Averill scored the extra marker in the sixth when he led off with a single, was sacrificed to second by Trosky, and crossed the plate on a double by Solters.

Bartell Breaks Up Duel With Lee by Hitting a Homer With 1 On.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 9.—Carl Hubbell today became the second man in all baseball history to pitch 20 consecutive victories. Before the largest crowd of the season at the Polo Grounds—36,529—the lean southpaw screwballer hurled the Giants to a 4-to-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Begun last July 17, his 20-win run equals that of a Giant great of another era, Rube Marquard, who turned the trick with one victory in 1911 and 19 in 1912. Hubbell had 16 straight last year and achieved his fourth of 1937 today.

He had a tough time for seven innings, hooking up with Bill Lee in a tight duel. In the seventh, however, the Giants gave him a two-run margin on singles by JoJo Moore, Jim Ripple and Johnny McCarthy. In the eighth, Dick Bartell put the game on ice by clouting his fifth homer of the season into the leftfield stands with a mate on base.

Frank Demaree belted a four-bagger in the ninth to save the Cubs from a shutout. But Hubbell was the master throughout, muffling his rivals with seven hits, fanning five and keeping all but one from passing second base throughout the first eight innings.

Ducky Medwick, the Cardinals' clouting outfielder, regained the National League batting lead yesterday as five of the members of baseball's "Big Six" in hitting changed places.

Medwick collected three hits in four chances to boost his average 22 points to .429, shoving Gil Brack, Brooklyn rookie, into second place. Ival Goodman, of the Reds, took over third place from the Phillies' Morrie Arnovich, with a .408 mark.

Gerry Walker, of the Tigers, lost ground but held his American League lead, while Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, advanced to second, with a 13-point jump to .451, and Lyn Lary, of the Indians, took over third.

Dr. Smythe's Boat Hogs Honors in Races Here

His 16-Foot Comet, Sassy Too, Beats Field of 34 to Hang Up Best Time of Day; Cruit's Entry, Heintz's Madic Also Win.

By Daniel Craig.

Dr. Verner Smythe again sailed his 16-foot comet "Sassy Too" to a smashing victory in the second race held by the Potomac River Sailing Association. Romping through a fleet of 34 boats, many of which carried twice as much sail as "Sassy," to win with the best elapsed time of the day, and bettering the time of "Madic," winner of the 20-foot open handicap class by 5 minutes and 41 seconds, Smythe set a new high for comets in finishing ahead of the large boats that started at 2:15, five minutes before he did. Another comet, Clyde Cruit's "So Big," beat "Madic" to turn in the next best time of any boat on the course.

First to cross the starting line were four boats in the 20-foot open class at 2:15. Bill Heintz's Madic pulled a "photographic finish" in track parlance, to nose out Ralph Young's "Myray" by one second, with H. C. Bush's Cricket II finishing ahead of Judge Prentice Edrington's Lady Avon by a slight margin. The 20-footers staged a hotly contested race, being closely bunched over the entire 5-mile course. Madic, an Albatross one-design, seemed to have the advantage over the two Sea Witch one-design boats, Cricket II and Myray when sailing on the wind, but Myray's speed down-wind was not enough to close up Madic's lead after she rounded the bell buoy and ran free for the finish line off the Naval Air Station.

In the comet class which got away at 2:20 Smythe opened a lead almost at the starting line and steadily increased it until 14 comets were astern and kept on until he passed all the boats of the 20-foot open class and finished ahead of the entire fleet. Clyde Cruit's So Big finished five minutes after Sassy Too but beat Couvert's Escapade, the third comet to finish, by more than three minutes. Barbara Myer's sailing her Minx for the first time this season, with Miss Florence Wright as her crew, beat five other veteran skippers to land in tenth place in the comet class.

Frank Levy repeated last week's performance to again win the Class A Handicap, beating a fleet of the large boats on both elapsed and corrected time, with his sloop Kittiwynk which is the largest sailboat racing on the Potomac this season. The Corinthian Sea Scouts after an afternoon of spinnaker heaving took their catboat Bobcat over the line for second place on corrected time, although Ted De Boer's Sandpiper, Arthur Carr's Sea Gull and Nelson Elgin's Buccaneer bettered the Bobcat's actual elapsed time over the course. Wildcat, another catboat crewed by Sea Scouts, was third on corrected time.

Matey Seen Only Preakness Threat to War Admiral Rout

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Bound, May 9.—Nineteen jockeys couldn't do it yesterday but I'm doing it today. Unless Charlie Kurtsinger has gone to the diner, I'm a Pullman car length ahead of the young man who piloted the Glen Riddle Farm's War Admiral to victory in the sixty-third running of the Kentucky Derby.

Trying to pull a Greta Garbo behind dark glasses, Kurtsinger failed to wear a set of blinkers on that $52,000 smile that hasn't changed one iota since it developed shortly after War Admiral crossed the finish line. He was as disguised as the dome of the U. S. Capitol.

HAIGHT.

Two weeks ago at Havre de Grace, some 15 minutes before he took War Admiral out to show the world that he could go the distance, I asked Kurtsinger who would win the Derby. He hesitated a moment and said, "I believe War Admiral can do it and I think Pompoon is the horse to beat."

This afternoon, somewhere in Indiana, I asked him who would win the Preakness. He hardly let me get the words out of my mouth before he answered through his smile, "War Admiral's a cinch." In fact, Kurtsinger probably will be surprised if the little colt do

RIPPY'S 72 WINS WOODMONT INVITATION MEDAL PLAYOFF

Next Honor Is Annexed By The Bear

By Bill McCormick.

Firenze Red Tape, a brown gelding belonging to Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, won top honors of the Washington Horse Show as the three-day exhibition of fine horseflesh came to a glorious conclusion before 3,000 spectators at the Meadowbroook Club yesterday.

The big brown was adjudged grand champion hunter of the show over Mrs. John Hay Whitney's The Bear recently acquired by the mistress of Llangollen stables.

The Bear was awarded the championship in the lightweight hunter class, in which another Whitney entry, Gray Knight, captured the reserve. Firenze Red Tape took top honors in the middle and heavy weight hunter championship, in which Chatter Chat, national hunter champion, could take only the reserve.

Thus was the stage set for a decision between the Whitney and Guggenheim horses, a matter over which the judges debated only a short while before declaring Firenze Red Tape the stand-out hunter of the show.

Mrs. Guggenheim Repeats.

The open jumping championship, decided on points made in the open jumping division throughout the three days of competition, was taken by Clipped Wings, an entry from Fort Myer, which was very capably handled in several difficult classes by Lieut. Frank S. Henry, who is soon to go to Fort Riley for further development.

Mrs. Guggenheim also took the second leg on the Gwinn Wheelwright Rust Memorial Trophy for hunt teams. Mrs. Whiteney, with two legs on the trophy and needing only one more victory for permanent possession, wound up in third place.

Lieut. Frank S. Henry, who is rapidly developing into one of the best horsemen in this section, did a noble job on a tired horse to beat out Mrs. Robert Guggenheim's Firenze Gay Lady after several grueling jump-offs in the $500 open jumping stake.

Seven out of 19 entries were called back in the ring for a four-obstacle jump-off at 4 feet 6 inches. Of these six, Firenze Gay Lady and Henry's horse, Clipped Wings, were summoned back to jump off at the same height for first place since both had scored tips but no knockdowns.

On that jump-off, Clipped Wings tipped the first jump, knocked down the second and went clean on the two remaining hurdles. Firenze Gay Lady knocked down the third and tipped the fourth to keep matters even.

Another jump-off was ordered at 4 feet 9 inches, and Clipped Wings, by then a badly tired mount, went clean on the first two jumps but toppled over the others. Firenze Gaylady, by now so temperamental she had to be almost shoved into the ring, knocked down the first jump, cleared the second but then started acting up before the grandstand spectators.

Troup Wins Hunter Stake.

After much persuasion, she was induced to attempt the next two jumps, which she promptly bowled over, giving Lieut. Henry's horse the blue.

Third prize was taken by Billy, entered by Capt. B. F. Luebbermann, fourth went to Broomfield, of Capt. Kenneth Hoge, and fifth and sixth moneys went to the Maytop Stable's Helium and U. S. Randle's Randle's Pride, respectively.

The $500 hunter stake was won by Mrs. J. Turner Moore, jr.'s, Troup, a surprise victor over the National Hunting Champion Chatter Chat, entered by Mrs. Ellsworth H. Augustus. Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Nobody's Fool and her Gray Knight captured third and fourth ribbons, respectively. Fifth money went to Firenze Clifton's Beau, entered by Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, and the sixth award was captured by Brown Bruin, an entry of Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh.

Horses owned by J. J. McIntyre and trained by Forrest Ward, of Virginia, fared very well in the gaited classes. Polyanna Peavine, entered by this combination, won the championship in the five gaited sweepstakes. The reserve championship in this class was taken by Russell L. Law's Lady Baltimore.

Gordon Nine, Brewers Lead City League

Of some 20 sandlot league games played yesterday in and around Washington, the 8-7 victory of Gordon's Cafeteria over the Dixie Pigs on No. 4 Monument diamond stole the show. About 4,000 fans watched two other National City League games on the Ellipse, while this one providing an extra-inning thriller, across the street.

Gordon's was trailing in the ninth inning by two runs when its centerfielder, Durkin, cracked a home run, and Harry Silverman shortly afterward drove in the tying run with his fourth hit of the game. Another Silverman, Jake, by name, won the struggle in the twelfth, driving in Harry with the winning run. W. Silverman, of Gordon's, fanned 11 Pigmen to send his team into a tie for first place with the Heurich Brewers.

The Beermen were meanwhile taming Union Printers, 10-2, in one of the Ellipse attractions, with Buck Lawson allowing three hits and Buck Stahl leading the Brewers to victory with some great hitting, fielding and base running.

Shady Grove Barbecue bounded into a tie for third place with a 10-7 win over Mount Rainier on Harry Colliflower's double in the ninth with the bases full. Frank Baroni's relief pitching for the last four innings set the Mounts back without a hit after they had pounded 12 off Giggles Adair.

Rose Liquor halted Anacostia in another National City Section A game, 5 to 2, to also go into a tie for third place. This was one of the Ellipse attractions.

Ross Jewelers, Read's Pharmacy and New Deal Men's Shop took a triple tie for first place in Section B, the Jewelers beating Star Radio, 4-2, on a one-hit pitching performance by Clubb. Read's halted 260th Coast Artillery, 9-1, and New Deal took a 5-3 decision from D. C. Plumbers, helped by 10 walks by Pitcher Leaman. White Haven A. C. in its first league start easily disposed of Georgetown A. C., 19-5, with a 20-hit attack and seven-hit pitching by Pennyfield.

Temple Nine to Play Three District Outfits

Lean College Sports Schedule Faces Fans This Week; Duke Track Meet Will Lure Many Stars.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Temple's invasion for three games with local and nearby baseball teams, and the Southern Conference outdoor track championship games at Duke, Saturday, feature a slim week in collegiate sports that heralds the close of the scholastic year.

The Owls make their first local appearance in several years this afternoon at the Hilltop where they hope to end the Hoyas' string of eight victories. Tomorrow they meet Maryland at College Park, and Wednesday will find them at Annapolis for a game with the Middies.

Pep Young, Temple coach, has a clever team under his wing this season, but the former Detroit second baseman is experiencing trouble with pitchers. Only two, both righthanders, have shown anything this season, and one of these, Jack Williams, a brilliant sophomore, has been assigned the task of whipping Georgetown.

Williams is one of the best major league prospects ever developed at Temple, and in 38 innings has fanned 53 batsmen. His 16 strikeouts at New York University's expense established a new Temple record.

George Patte, elongated veteran, probably will get the call against Maryland, while Vince Kadany, if his ailing arm is right, will pitch against Navy. Temple's victims this season include Dartmouth, N. Y. U., Vermont, Muhlenberg, Ursinus, Gettysburg and Albright. It has lost only two games.

The Southern Conference meet looks like a free-for-all with Maryland, Duke and North Carolina considered the outstanding challengers. In the four years the meet has been held on Duke's fast and roomy track all records established by schools now in the Southeastern Conference, with the exception of four, have been lowered. Eddie Hamm, Georgia Tech's ace of a decade ago, remains in a five-way tie for the century mark of 9.8 seconds, and holds the broad jump record of 25 feet 6¾ inches. Both were made in 1928.

Gees, of Kentucky, is still on the books with his 1:55.8 for the half-mile, and Stewart, of Auburn, with his high jump of 6 feet 2¾ inches, is still supreme. Of these marks the 100-yard dash may go, the 880 is almost certain to be broken, and the high and broad jump marks will be seriously threatened.

With Bill Guckeyson, Frank Cronin and other Terpmen at their peak, as Coach Geary Eppley says they will be, Maryland will be a strong contender for the title.

War Admiral Quits Derby Site for Preakness

(News item—New York Boxing Commission orders Max Schmeling to start training for his title fight with Jimmy Braddock in New York June 3.)

It finally happened—a boxing commission gone plumb punch-drunk. Heretofore the mental goofiness spawned by the prize ring had always been exclusive with the guys who had been inside the ropes taking too many on the lug and leading with their chins—poor addle-pated guys whose thinking machinery was knocked out of kilter by those punches around the head.

POVICH.

You've seen 'em—those slug-nutty former pugs who get about with a round-heeled gait, pausing, perhaps, to shadowbox with a fire hydrant or strike a fighting posture at the sound of a street car gong. Something upstairs has given way and the poor fellows who were too willing to take a punch in their fighting days are, more often than not, public charges now.

* * * *

Slightly batty—that's what they are and notice him carefully the next time you see a punch-drunk pug. That word batty is no colloquialism of the prize ring. They are actually batty, meaning that they bat their eyelids, one of the first symptoms of punch drunkenness. Watch the fellow who has been in there taking too many punches and see him open and shut his eyes habitually. It's an infallible sign, according to medics who have made a study of drunkenness.

* * * *

There used to be an old fighter who sold papers on Times Square—he had been one of Benny Leonard's most persistent challengers for the world lightweight title—a great fighter in his day, but he paid for the aggressiveness that won him plenty of battles in the ring. He cracked mentally and soon was reduced to peddling papers. I am getting around to the time when he was toting a bundle of papers across Broadway when a surface car clanged its gong threateningly. The poor fellow flung his papers away and actually turned to face the street car with his left held high and his right cocked. That's what the sound of the gong—any gong—meant to that poor guy.

* * * *

But I started to say something about the New York Boxing Commission and I will get around to that presently. I am reminded of the New York Boxing Commission because I am reminded of Ad Wolgast, a great little scrapper in his day, who for these many years has been a mental case out there on the Coast.

* * * *

These many years poor Wolgast has been eternally training for what he thinks is his come-back fight with Battling Nelson who, if I remember rightly, hung up his gloves 25 years ago. The attendants never interfere with Wolgast's rigorous training routine. In deference to the great fighter he has been, they kindly rigged up light and heavy bags for Ad and provided other training accouterments.

* * * *

Wolgast wants to be in condition for that fight with Nelson which is never coming off and thus I am reminded of the New York Boxing Commission, which is equally as deluded, apparently, as poor old Wolgast.

* * * *

Because the fight for which the New York commission has ordered Schmeling to start training—the Braddock fight on June 3—is equally as phantom a bout as the Wolgast-Nelson return battle. It ain't coming off at all.

But the New York commission is going blithely along thinking that it is and making itself appear absurd by ordering Schmeling to the United States. It's the same mental logic as poor Wolgast's and places the entire membership of the commission under suspicion. Punch drunkenness apparently is not limited to those who swing gloves, but to those who administer the affairs of the prize ring as well.

The New York commission ought to know better. They ought to know that Braddock is signed to defend his title against Joe Lewis in Chicago on June 22 and even though that fight may be forestalled by legal complications, there will never be a Braddock-Schmeling fight on June 3, or any other date before late fall.

So, beware, you folks who may be tempted to sound a gong in the presence of the New York Boxing Commission. If the temptation is too great, all right then, but don't forget to duck—because the commission will probably come out fighting just like any other set of guys who somewhere along the fistic road took a few too many punches to the head.

A Runaway In the Event Seen for Colt

By the United Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 9.—War Admiral, the mighty little son of Man 'o War, who made every post a winning one in the sixty-third running of the Kentucky Derby, today moved on Baltimore and a shot at the Preakness Stake.

The Preakness won't be run until next Saturday, so they sent the chunky little flyer by train. If there had been any hurry about getting him there, they would have allowed him to go cross-country on foot.

The Preakness is at his mercy. Everybody believes that, from the astute critic to the lowliest member of the record crowd of 75,000 which watched the running of the Derby at Churchill Downs Saturday. In his three races this season War Admiral has licked every 3-year-old worth his daily ration of fodder.

In the Derby he took 19 of the finest thoroughbreds in the country and handcuffed them with his blinding speed and unflagging power. He was first out of the paddock, first at the mile, first at stretch, first past the judges, and, to make everything complete, he was first in the betting.

Almost No Contest.

Watching the Derby run made one think of a greyhound race—with War Admiral acting the part of the mechanical rabbit who never can be caught. He was seriously challenged but once and that by Pompoon, the handsome son of Pompey. Close to home, Pompoon, trying to remove the stain on the name of his dad, who never could go a distance, gave all he had and began moving up. But he "moved up" for a moment only, for War Admiral, given his head by his rider, Charley Kurtsinger, turned on the heat and rolled away. In a twinkling he had opened up two lengths and went on to win under wraps. His flanks were scarcely wet when he finished. He was breathing easily and appeared ready and fit for another mile or more.

Kurtsinger, who now has two Derby wins to his credit—he was up on Twenty Grand when that redhot set the record for the race—said he knew the race was his when War Admiral met Pompoon's challenge so easily.

"He nearly jumped out from under me," Charley said, "when I let him go. He is as fine a colt as I ever rode."

No Derby horse ever will get a better ride than Kurtsinger gave War Admiral Saturday. Told by the venerable trainer for the Samuel Ridle Stable, George Conway, to get his horse out on top and stay there, Kurtsinger obeyed to the letter. He was away from the barrier in front of the horses with superior early foot, and his judgment of War Admiral's strength was perfect. There never was a time in the race when he didn't have enough horse to meet any challenge.

The race was fairly won. The conditions were perfect, and despite the size of the field there was little or no rough work during the mile and a quarter journey. The other horses didn't have what it took. Man o' War's boy did.

Tom Malone Dies; Was Sandlot Pilot

Tom Malone, long a prominent figure in sandlot baseball of the Washington area, died yesterday morning at 8 a. m. in his Park Lane, Va., home. Malone was one of the most successful managers in local sandlot ranks.

In 1921 and 1922 he managed the Register and Treasury teams of the Inter-Bureau League, winning two titles. He formed a Cherrydale team in 1924 and managed it for three years, winning the northern Virginia championship. In 1927 he won the Departmental League title.

The funeral will be at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

The spring racing season in Maryland enters its final week and the absence of horse tampering has been noticeable. Unless someone is holding back on us, there hasn't been a single case of horse doping, sponging or tampering. In fact, rulings that have been made on jockeys have been for rough riding and other tactics that do not come under the category of crookedness. Perhaps the chief reason for the clear sailing of the game was the passing of a bill last winter that made tampering with a horse in Maryland a felony, punishable by three years' imprisonment. The fall meeting at Bowie will be the acid test for the new law. Now that the Kentucky Derby is history, the turf spotlight will be in our own territory the coming week-end with the running of the Preakness. Many Washingtonians will see the race in the afternoon and then stay in Baltimore for the Preakness ball that night. More than 3,500 attended the ball last year and the committee, headed by Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, is making plans for more than 5,000 this year. BILL.

First race—Dark Flyer will have to be caught before this purse goes elsewhere. I believe this one can hold the field safe. Travelo and Doris Rene are keen contenders and deserving of consideration.

Second race—Greatorex has a nice figure and should take this kind into camp. Syriac and Dundrillen probably will chase the top one home.

Third race—Vitascope is a formidable fellow and needs only to run one of his good races to take this purse. Acautaw has worked well and is dangerous. Balcony for the show award.

Fourth race—I look for Proteus to lead this pack to the wire. This is not a standout, however, and it will take good handling. Stool Pigeon is a threat among these. Sun Sweep is a possible surprise.

Fifth race—The number of Abaddon probably will be displayed in the winner's block on the results board after this event. Deserves the call. Jelly Roll and Catomar are fair ones and should be close.

Sixth race—Drawbridge is Clocker Mike's good thing. I'm going to string along with him. Graceful Flight ranks high on the speed books. Morning to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Cancel and Barnstorm promise to do a lot of running in this field. I prefer them in the order named. Golden Key seems headed for a pay-off position.

Eighth race—Church Call finds a group that seems to fit. I'm looking forward to a set of brackets. Maddest and Toney Boy are most dangerous of the others.

Best Bet—Church Call.

Brescia Meets Local Heavy Here Tonight

took a long rest after the Louis fight, and the Gallagher bout will mark his first contest since that unhappy episode.

Gallagher Tops Once.

Gallagher, who was the top heavyweight here last summer until he was downed by little Buck Everett, emerged from his usual winter's hibernation at the Arena a few weeks ago against Sandy McDonald, of Texas. Much to everybody's surprise, Sandy held Marty to a draw.

A six-round heavyweight semi-final, two six-round preliminaries and a four-round curtain-raiser will round out the program.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (the highest to G (the lowest).

MAIN EVENT—Jorge Brescia, Argentina, vs. Marty Gallagher, Washington, heavyweights, 10 rounds. Rated B. Brescia is one of the better young heavyweight prospects. He was rushed along too fast when tossed in with Joe Louis, but even at that he almost mowed the Brown Bomber down for keeps. He is starting again and has chosen Gallagher as his first opponent. Personally, we think the days when Marty could absorb such a beating as Tony Galento once gave him are over and look for Brescia's heavy hitting to win for him, possibly by a knockout. If so, it will be the first time the chill has been put on Marty in a local ring.

SEMIFINAL—Joe Lipps, Ty Ty, Ga., vs. Murray Kanner, Washington, heavyweights, 6 rounds. Rated D. Kanner, although not a pleasing fighter to watch, had great possibilities when he turned professional. He was tossed to the wolves in the person of Max Roesch, another youngster, who punched him to pieces. If Lipps is in any kind of condition, he should give Murray another pummeling. Pummeling or no pummeling, Lipps should win.

PRELIMINARIES—Mario Caroselli, Italy, vs. Hunter Crostic, Richmond, middleweights, 6 rounds. Rated C. Caroselli has the class, but Crostic will prove a severe test. Caroselli in the long run.

Johnny Stilso, Baltimore, vs. George Abrams, Washington, welterweights, 4 rounds. Rated C. Abrams will go far and this will be his starter.

..The Skipper's Log..

By Daniel Craig.

Arthur Clephane, Judge Prentice Edrington, Ted De Boer and John Maloney left for Solomons Friday night to sail Art's new 8-meter Loki around from the mouth of the Patuxent to the Gibson Island Yacht Club above Annapolis. They hope to drop anchor there before nightfall Saturday in order that they may return to Washington in time to sail in the race Sunday afternoon. Such a crew of veterans should find the 100-mile trip up the bay easy sailing.

* * * *

T. F. Schneider plans to take his schooner, Privateer, which lies now at Capital around to join the Gibson Island squadron some time next week. Privateer has a fine complement of navigator's instruments, which includes a barograph that permanently records the rise and fall of that old standby the barometer and is very useful in estimating weather conditions, and a new type of hand bearing compass, which Schneider got on his recent trip to England. A compass in the hand is worth two in the binnacle for securing cross-bearings according to Privateer's crew.

The big schooner and George Jensen's 37-foot sloop, Blackhawk, will probably be entered in the 100-mile race from Gibson Island to Cedar Point on June 27. A number of Washington yachtsmen are members of the island club, among them Paul F. Myers, who makes the club a base for his 46-foot Argosy II in the summer, and Arthur Clephane, who will sail his 8-meter Loki with the squadron this year.

Up at the Potomac Boat Club, members were very much stirred up over the loss of three of their new floats during the flood. At a special meeting last Wednesday someone suggested using the Goodyear blimp Enterprise and the idea met with immediate acceptance. So the birds you may have seen craning their necks out the blimp's gondola yesterday afternoon down the river were members Jerry Lawler, Jim Burch and Bob Duncan, of Potomac.

The winner of the race from Old Dominion to Gunston Cove on Memorial Day will receive the Commodore's Cup which is to be presented this year by Verner Smythe, of Capital.

* * * *

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the President's Cup Regatta Association, James A. Councilor, chairman, and Jack Marsh, chairman of the sailing committee, were instrumental in the decision to have the sailing events the week-end before the powerboat races, which will allow a great many more sailing entries, who could not afford to come to the regatta in the middle of the week, as was the case in former years, to compete.

* * * *

The 135-mile Albany-New York motorboat race date has been stepped-up from the ninth, as reported herein last week, to the sixteenth of May.

Canoeists may be interested in an article which gives the construction details for a sail rig carried in the June issue of Popular Mechanics.

The blues have at last struck in at Oregon Inlet. Not the usual advance guard of big fellows, that run from eight to twelve pounds, but smaller, so-called shoal fish, that weigh but a pound or two, with now and then one that might scale five.

ACKERMAN

This coming week will probably show whether the big ones have spread on up the coast, to lay until late August far offshore along the Jersey coast, or whether some local condition has been the cause of their not coming in during the past three weeks.

Saturday was the first day they were caught. Every boat out was in them, but not to the extent that was to be expected. Tops for any boat was only about 40. Sport that is indeed poor when you use that of the past three years as a criterion.

Due to the bad weather and poor fishing, it is possible to make reservations for boats. It is still advisable to phone ahead.

Another local party, Bill Gary, Lou Alcorn and Ed Pond, reports a catch of 17 bass late Wednesday afternoon.

Joe Turner's party, which included Mrs. Turner, were unfortunate in leaving the fishing grounds Wednesday afternoon just before they started hitting.

Having promised many friends a bluefish or two, Joe stopped at one of the nets to buy them, just as many others have done during the past two weeks. While gutting them, they found in the stomach of one, not an eel, as many will say it was, but a snake. It had evidently been washed down with the great gobs of badly discolored fresh water that has been filling the inlet during each ebb tide.

Anglers are using the facilities the fishhouses at Wanchese have made available for them, so that they can get their catches home in good shape. The houses have on hand small barrels that will ice down about 40 pounds of bluefish or about two channel bass. They can be carried or shipped.

George Bowen, of Solomons Island, reported late Saturday night that the extremely heavy thunder squalls had held the boats in all day, but with good weather over Sunday there should be good catches of hardheads.

Frank Del Vecchio says that on Friday hardheads were being caught from Plum Point on up to the pier at Chesapeake Beach. The fish coming close in under the shore to get the warm water could be taken by casting out from the beach.

Catches are being made most every day in the warm river waters of the Eastern Shore—Choptank, Nanticoke, Honga.

Twelve thousand trout fry, the first to be hatched in the history of West Virginia by a State agency from eggs taken from native brook trout inhabiting an open stream, are doing right well in the hatchery at Marlinton. Hatched several weeks later than those from commercial hatchery eggs, they are growing rapidly in a sturdy attempt to outgrow the "furrin" brookies.

The 21,000 fish of legal length and longer that West Virginia stocked this year are given so that local anglers will not go long distances, only to get on a stream that has been stocked with smaller fish and closed to fishing until 1938.

Aerial Mapping Is Aiding AAA In Soil Check

Calling aerial mapping a "relatively cheap and improved method of determining performance" under the soil conservation program, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration yesterday announced airplanes will map approximately 350,000 square miles of land in 34 States during 1937.

Bids will be opened May 11 and 21 for performance of this work, already under way in various areas, the AAA said. These will include 2,581 square miles in Maryland, including 72 miles in Prince Georges County.

An aerial mapping project already under way in Virginia will cover more than 29,000 square miles, the project being conducted "under a co-operative agreement in which a number of Government agencies are taking part."

Enlargements Explained.

"Aerial photography * * * has been used for some time," the AAA said. "Under this system, photographs of the land to be mapped are made from the air. After the photographs are developed, they are enlarged to a specified scale. The enlargement serves not only as a picture but also as a map of the area. From the enlargement, which shows several square miles of land, is determined the boundaries of each farm and of each field on the farm. In addition to making available the exact number of acres, the enlargements also show all prominent ground features, such as trees, buildings, roads and streams.

Aid to Farmers.

"One of the most important activities in connection with the agricultural conservation program has been the correct measuring of land of farmers participating in the program. Accuracy is imperative because payments to farmers are based on the acres measured. A number of proved measuring methods have been used, ranging from the use of measuring wheels to actual surveys by registered surveyors.

"Aerial mapping, in addition to being more accurate and considerably cheaper than other methods, will provide a record that can be used from year to year for a large number of farms, thus eliminating the expense and delay incident to measuring these farms each year.

Accurate Crop Check.

"This is possible because aerial photography makes available a complete picture of each farm.

"With this picture map of each individual farm available, and with each field measured accurately, it is possible for experienced checkers to determine quickly the area of crop planted in each field without the necessity of remeasuring the field each year.

"Farmers generally have been enthusiastic over aerial mapping because this method virtually eliminates errors that may not have been caught by previous measurements. Aerial mapping also provides a uniform system of measurement eliminating possible dissatisfaction between neighbors whose farms may have been measured by different methods. The 'picture map' is of value to many farmers in planning a farm program and in laying out fields. Some farmers have obtained copies of the aerial maps and had them framed. The cost of providing the aerial maps cannot be definitely ascertained until bids have been opened and checked."

Still-Born Babies Given Life by New Injection Methods

New York, May 9 (AP).—A method giving life to still-born babies which he said had been successful in more than 600 cases was described today by Dr. Robert A. Wilson, of St. Mary's College, Brooklyn.

"The theory of saving still-born babies is this," he explained, "* * * the passing of a metal tube into the trachea (windpipe) of the baby, supplying it with a mixture of carbon dioxide and oxygen.

"In order to make the baby inhale this gas, a respiratory stimulant is injected into the umbilical vein and enters the baby's circulation. This causes the baby to take a number of deep gasps, which cause the gases to enter the lungs and the blood."

Mothers' Day Observed By District Club Women

Mothers' Day was celebrated yesterday at teas and services by many clubs and organizations.

Many club women attended the services and massing of the colors at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington, under auspices of the American War Mothers, and then participated in teas in various sections of the city.

In the morning, the Catholic Daughters of America attended a Mothers' Day communion at St. Mary's Church and breakfast afterwards at Chaplin's Restaurant.

At the Y. W. C. A., many members and guests listened to Mothers' Day songs and music at the music hour. Mrs. Harold Brooks, of the Chevy Chase chapter, was the hostess. A group of boys of Powell High School sang.

The Sigma Tau Gamma Sorority entertained at a tea in observance of Mothers' Day on the terrace of the Brook Farm Tea House, Chevy Chase. The guests were mothers of sorority members. Mrs. Arthur Francis Swinburne, president of the Alpha chapter, presided at the tea table.

Dr. Edwin A. Chapin, curator, department of entomology, U. S. National Museum, will be the guest speaker at the tea of the American Association of University Women tonight.

Miss Ann Fuller Abbott, director of the Abbott School of Art, will explain the making of posters at the meeting of the art section tonight. Dr. Edith Allen will be in charge.

Mme. Grant Cantacuzene, new president of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, has outlined an intensive program of work for the next three years.

Among other plans Mme. Cantacuzene outlined was the opening of a clubhouse. The clubhouse will not only be the meeting place of the League of Republican Women, but an information bureau will be established from which literature and information of all kinds will be sent out to the Republican women of the Nation.

The advisory committee of the league includes Mrs. Alvin T. Hart honorary chairman. Mrs. Hart is past vice chairman of the Republican National Committee. Also Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister of the late Vice President Curtis; Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, a member of Congress from Massachusetts; Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, national president of Women Geographers; Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mrs. William Sherman Walker, Mrs. Frederick H. Brook and Mrs. Anne Archbold.

Young New was educated at Butler University, Indianapolis, and in 1878 became a reporter on the Indianapolis Journal, which his father later purchased.

After rising rapidly through the ranks, New became editor of the paper. In this sphere he exercised wide influence in politics. In 1903 he disposed of his interest in the Journal and became president of the Bedford Stone & Construction Co.

In 1896 he was elected to the Indiana State Senate, where he served four years. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he volunteered, and was made a captain and later assistant adjutant general of the Third Brigade of the Second Division of the Seventh Army Corps.

He was a member of the Republican National Committee from 1900 until 1912, and he served as vice chairman in 1907 and 1908, and as a delegate to several national conventions.

Was Leader in Party.

He was elected United States Senator from Indiana for the 1917-23 term, and was a member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs. During the World War he had much to do with speeding emergency legislation. At the conclusion of the war he became a member of the Foreign Relations Committee and of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

New was a candidate for re-election in 1922, but was defeated for the nomination by former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, and, at the expiration of his term, he was appointed Postmaster General by President Harding, to succeed Hubert Work, who was transferred to the Department of the Interior.

Bit of Chemical Could Cure All Epilepsy if Way Were Known

Paper Prepared for Psychiatric Association Reveals Possibility of Treating Genes of Mentally Sick by Replacing Ions.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 9.—The "tantalizing though" that a bit of chemical no larger than a mustard seed, if it could be rightly divided among the brains of all persons now living, might rid the human race of epilepsy was presented in a report to the American Psychiatric Association here tonight.

This dazzling preview of possibilities scientists are beginning to see for some day remaking sick minds, and of understanding the nature of mentality, was given in a paper, released in advance by the association, to be read tomorrow by William G. Lennox, M.D., of Harvard Medical School.

Epilepsy as a gateway to the labyrinth of puzzles of the human mind was suggested because there are in the United States today half a million epileptics. This, said Dr. Lennox, is about the same number as have diabetes or active tuberculosis.

All epileptics he said are "predisposed." The predisposed, he said, is "an inherent, recessive quality." It is probably a "gene," a single molecule appearing once among each of the millions of molecules in each living cell.

Two roads of attack, he said, are open. One is to breed out these epilepsy genes, which would require thousands of years. The other is to alter the molecule directly by chemical means.

"This," Dr. Lennox said, "is a knowledge we do not possess.

"It is a tantalizing thought that the replacement, say, of a potassium for a sodium ion, on a certain molecule, the total bulk of which for all persons living would not be larger than a mustard seed, would eliminate epilepsy from the race.

"The fact that genes can be altered by exposure of X-rays gives hope that some day a way will be found."

A goal nearer to realization, he said, is elimination of the "seizures" of epilepsy. This again is foreseen through the recently discovered chemical mechanisms of the brain.
